Publisher's Acknowledgment

When this book reaches you and you and you, the men of the 33rd will be here and there—and “over there.” Officers and men will have taken their places with different units to create new Divisions—to form the nucleus of new fighting units. Some of the Commanding Officers and many officers of the staff and line and enlisted men will have taken up their new posts. But wherever they are they will carry on the great tradition of the 33rd Division—the old Prairie Division that brought glory and fame to Illinois in every engagement in which the men of Illinois were engaged. The Editors and Publishers of the Army Press desire to express their appreciation to the Division Commander, Major General Samuel T. Lawton, the Chief of Staff, Colonel H. E. Thornton, the Division Historian, Lt. Colonel Julius Klein, and to every officer and enlisted man in the 33rd Division who has helped to make this permanent record of the 33rd possible. Without their help and guidance, and without the cooperation on research and editorial material by the Division Historical section, this book would not have been possible.

This record depicts, historically, the personnel and some of the training activities of the men of the 33rd Division, U.S.A.
The many and great demands made upon the free time of the personnel, together with attendance at Service Schools away from the post, has made it impossible to show photographs of all the men. Accordingly, it was necessary to picture those actually available at the time data for this Review were compiled.

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE THIRTY-THIRD DIVISION:

I appreciate this opportunity to express my greetings to the officers and men of the 33d Division. The pictorial review which the division is publishing will not only contain reminders of many interesting events, but it will symbolize the great advances in training and efficiency which have characterized the division's activities since it was inducted into the Federal service.

Faithfully yours,

Chief of Staff.

THIRTY-THIRD DIVISION

LINCOLN MEMORIAL
WASHINGTON, D. C.

SAMUEL T. LAWTON
MAJOR GENERAL

CAMP FORREST, TENN.

16 February 1942

TO THE OFFICERS AND MEN OF THE THIRTY-THIRD INFANTRY DIVISION:

Our world has changed since the photographs inclosed between the covers of this book were taken. Then we were at peace; today we are at war. One of our infantry regiments, augmented by hundreds from each of its sister infantry regiments, has left us. So have a battalion of our howitzers and a battalion of our Quartermaster Regiment. Thousands of our men, hundreds of our officers, have been sent in groups, large and small, to augment regiments and battalions leaving for the battle-front, or to help create new divisions.

We are about to reorganize as a triangular division; we will lose many organizations; there will come to us immediately many thousands of recruits direct from reception centers. We have received, and will continue to receive, many new officers. These additions to our ranks have been welcomed, and they are ready to fully play their part as soldiers of this Division. The officers and men of the Division have changed, but the spirit of this Division will never change. Wherever our comrades have gone, they will always be remembered by us. They, and all those who shall from day to day fill the ranks of this Division, will live and fight for our country's cause with integrity and honor. For that is the spirit of the Thirty-Third Infantry Division and of all those who are forever included on the pages of this treasured memento of our service.

Samuel T. Lawton

SAMUEL T. LAWTON,
Major General, Commanding

HISTORY OF

Troops of the 129th Infantry, 33rd Division, coming ashore in English Lighter, No. 34, Brest, France, May 24, 1918.

WAR OF 1812. In 1809 Nathaniel Pope, Secretary of the Territory of Illinois, as acting Governor began preparations for the erection of a military department. From that time until 1811, there were organized in Illinois four regiments. In 1811 Captain White's company of Gallatin County militia was active in the Battle of Tippecanoe. In 1812 an expedition of 312 Illinois militia attacked villages of the Kickapoo and Miami Indians and again in 1813 Illinois militia made successful attacks on the tribes of central Illinois.

BLACK HAWK WAR. During the Black Hawk War of 1831-32, the State of Illinois furnished 174 companies of volunteer rangers and spies, which were actually mustered into the service of the United States for various periods of time. No decisive engagements were fought until July 21, 1832, when Black Hawk was defeated. On August 2 a battle on the banks of the Mississippi virtually ended the war. Abraham Lincoln, who was a volunteer from Illinois in this war, may be said to have been a member of one of the antecedents of the 33rd Division.

MEXICAN WAR. During the Mexican War, Illinois supplied four regiments for a twelve-month service period, two regiments for "during the war," and four independent companies of cavalry for "during the war," and several companies as parts of Regular Army regiments.

THE CIVIL WAR. Typical of other post-war periods, the years between the Mexican and Civil Wars were marked by military decadence, so that when the President issued his call for volunteers on April 15, 1861, Illinois had no trained and organized militia companies to offer. There were, however, several independent militia companies throughout the state and many of these formed the nucleus of splendid companies. In every phase of this great war, Illinois troops played an important part. At Shiloh, Fort Henry, Fort Donelson, Corinth, Vicksburg, Chickamauga, Gettysburg and other battle fronts, Illinois troops contributed their share to the saving of the Union by courageous and brilliant fighting.

POST-WAR PERIOD. In the years that followed, the Illinois National Guard became more efficient, better trained, better equipped than in any preceding period. One of the first suggestions of motorization was made during 1890-91, when each regiment of Infantry organized and maintained a bicycle corps for messenger service. When the call came for active service in the Spanish-American War, Illinois was prepared to send her share of well-trained soldiers to the front.

SPANISH-AMERICAN WAR. In this war, as in all other emergencies of the past, Illinois not only filled her quota, but was ready to send more troops into service. However, they, like many other mobilized units throughout the United States, were not allowed to engage the enemy in battle.

EARLY PART OF THE CENTURY. Following the Spanish-American War, the Illinois troops resumed peace-time military training. A great impetus to the development of the National Guard came in 1903 when Congress passed and approved an "Act to promote the efficiency of the militia," which provided that the National Guard become a part of the military force of the U. S. Another impetus was the passage by the 40th General Assembly of Illinois of a code requiring examination of all candidates for commissions. An appropriation of $395,000 was made to begin the erection of armories.

MEXICAN BORDER. During the Mexican border dispute of 1916, Illinois units were stationed in Texas all the way from El Paso to Brownsville. There they engaged in maneuvers and other military training.

WORLD WAR. When the President's first call came in 1917, most of the regiments of the Illinois National Guard, following a few months of guarding railroad bridges and industrial plants and preliminary training near home, were again mobilized in Texas, this time at Camp Logan. There they were formed into the 33rd Division under command of a regular army general, an Illinoisan, Major General George Bell, Jr. Intensive training began and in 1918 the first units were sent to embarkation points. By early summer, the entire division was in France. With the exception of the First Field Artillery and the Eighth Infantry, all of the Illinois regiments were reorganized in Texas into four war strength regiments of Infantry, two to a brigade; two additional regiments of field artillery; a regiment of combat engineers; a field signal battalion; three machine-gun battalions; a trench mortar battery; a military police company; and ammunition, sanitary and supply trains.

ORGANIZATION OF 33RD DIVISION. The division was commanded by Major General George Bell, Jr. The 65th Infantry Brigade was commanded by Brig. Gen. Edward L. King, and Brig. Gen. Paul A. Wolf commanded the 66th Infantry Brigade. The 58th Field Artillery Brigade was commanded by Brig. Gen. Henry D. Todd, Jr.

The two infantry regiments comprising the 65th Brigade were designated the 129th, commanded by Col. Charles H. Greene, and the 130th, commanded (in France) by Col. John V. Clinkin.

The 129th Infantry was made up entirely of units of the old Third Illinois, a regiment with a history dating back to 1811. The 130th Infantry, made up of the old Fourth Illinois, was originally organized in 1882.

The two regiments of the 66th Brigade were the 131st Infantry, commanded by Col. Joseph Sanborn, and the 132nd Infantry, commanded by Col. Abel Davis. Both regiments were from Chicago. The 131st, formerly the First Illinois, was organized in 1874. In France, 353 members gave their lives. The 132nd, formerly the Second Illinois, was originally organized in 1875.

Three regiments composed the 58th Field Artillery Brigade. They were the 122nd, commanded by Col. Milton J. Foreman; the 123rd, commanded by Col. Charles G. Davis; the 124th, commanded by Col. Horatio N. Hackett.

From the handful of courageous pioneers who first settled in the area now covered by the State of Illinois and who organized into bands of militia to protect themselves from marauding Indians, there leads down the years to the present a trail of unselfish service and glorious military achievements which today form the proud traditions and heritage of the Illinois National Guard.

PRE-REVOLUTIONARY PERIOD. Boisbriant, Commandant of the Illinois District of the Province of Louisiana for the French Government, organized the provincial militia during the period from 1712-1723. These organizations fought the Fox, Natchez and Chickasaw Indians.

REVOLUTIONARY WAR. Through the use of local militia, George Rogers Clark won and held the Illinois country for the United States during the Revolution. Without a fight, Clark managed to win the Illinois country, established it as a county of Virginia, made the French his allies, and gained the neutrality of the Indians. After a one-day siege he captured Vincennes from the British.

During the Mexican War, Illinois supplied four regiments for a twelve-month service period, two regiments for "during the war," and four independent companies of cavalry for "during the war," and several companies as parts of Regular Army regiments.

One of the first suggestions of motorization was made during 1890-91, when each regiment of Infantry organized and maintained a bicycle corps for messenger service. When the call came for active service in the Spanish-American War, Illinois was prepared to send her share of well-trained soldiers to the front.

In this war, as in all other emergencies of the past, Illinois not only filled her quota, but was ready to send more troops into service. However, they, like many other mobilized units throughout the United States, were not allowed to engage the enemy in battle.

Following the Spanish-American War, the Illinois troops resumed peace-time military training. A great impetus to the development of the National Guard came in 1903 when Congress passed and approved an "Act to promote the efficiency of the militia," which provided that the National Guard become a part of the military force of the U. S. Another impetus was the passage by the 40th General Assembly of Illinois of a code requiring examination of all candidates for commissions. An appropriation of $395,000 was made to begin the erection of armories.

During the Mexican border dispute of 1916, Illinois units were stationed in Texas all the way from El Paso to Brownsville. There they engaged in maneuvers and other military training.

When the President's first call came in 1917, most of the regiments of the Illinois National Guard, following a few months of guarding railroad bridges and industrial plants and preliminary training near home, were again mobilized in Texas, this time at Camp Logan. There they were formed into the 33rd Division under command of a regular army general, an Illinoisan, Major General George Bell, Jr. Intensive training began and in 1918 the first units were sent to embarkation points. By early summer, the entire division was in France. With the exception of the First Field Artillery and the Eighth Infantry, all of the Illinois regiments were reorganized in Texas into four war strength regiments of Infantry, two to a brigade; two additional regiments of field artillery; a regiment of combat engineers; a field signal battalion; three machine-gun battalions; a trench mortar battery; a military police company; and ammunition, sanitary and supply trains.

The division was commanded by Major General George Bell, Jr. The 65th Infantry Brigade was commanded by Brig. Gen. Edward L. King, and Brig. Gen. Paul A. Wolf commanded the 66th Infantry Brigade. The 58th Field Artillery Brigade was commanded by Brig. Gen. Henry D. Todd, Jr.

The two infantry regiments comprising the 65th Brigade were designated the 129th, commanded by Col. Charles H. Greene, and the 130th, commanded (in France) by Col. John V. Clinkin.

The 129th Infantry was made up entirely of units of the old Third Illinois, a regiment with a history dating back to 1811. The 130th Infantry, made up of the old Fourth Illinois, was originally organized in 1882.

The two regiments of the 66th Brigade were the 131st Infantry, commanded by Col. Joseph Sanborn, and the 132nd Infantry, commanded by Col. Abel Davis. Both regiments were from Chicago. The 131st, formerly the First Illinois, was organized in 1874. In France, 353 members gave their lives. The 132nd, formerly the Second Illinois, was originally organized in 1875.

Three regiments composed the 58th Field Artillery Brigade. They were the 122nd, commanded by Col. Milton J. Foreman; the 123rd, commanded by Col. Charles G. Davis; the 124th, commanded by Col. Horatio N. Hackett.

THE THIRTY-THIRD DIVISION

The 122nd was made up of the Chicago element of the old Illinois First Cavalry, organized in 1894 and converted into field artillery in 1917. The 123rd was converted from the Sixth Illinois Infantry. The 124th had as its nucleus three troops of the old First Cavalry located in Springfield and Urbana. The rest of the personnel came from East St. Louis and Peoria. The 58th Brigade served in France as an Army rather than as a divisional artillery brigade. At no time was it in action with its own 33rd Division. Instead, it served with great success as supporting artillery to five other infantry divisions in succession.

One of the finest combat organizations of the 33rd Division was the 108th Engineer Regiment, commanded by Col. Henry A. Allen. It was organized in Chicago in 1911 as Engineer Co. A, Illinois National Guard.

The three machine-gun battalions of the division, the 122nd, commanded by Major Mariano B. Southwick, the 123rd, commanded by Major Albert L. Culbertson, and the 124th, commanded by Major Floyd F. Putnam, were made up of troops formerly belonging to the Fifth and Seventh Illinois Infantry Regiments.

The 108th Trench Mortar Battery was commanded by Captain Charles J. Kraft.

The 108th Field Signal Battalion was commanded by, in turn, Majors Charles R. Forbes, John P. Lucas, and Alvin A. McNeal. It was originally organized as a Signal Company in 1891.

The ammunition, supply, and medical trains and the military police were all grouped with divisional headquarters troops, under the command of Col. Charles D. Center.

The 108th Ammunition Train, commanded by Lt. Col. Walter J. Fisher, was attached to the 58th Field Artillery Brigade.

The 108th Sanitary Train, commanded by Col. Harry D. Orr, was composed of four field hospitals and four ambulance companies.

COMBAT RECORD OF THE 33RD DIVISION. No finer summary of the combat actions of the 33rd Division in France could be cited than that written by General John J. Pershing in a letter of commendation to the Division. He wrote: "The Division had an interesting and varied battle experience. One of those schooled with the British Expeditionary Forces, it arrived in France towards the end of May, 1918, where it trained with the Fourth Army. Although, as a division, it did not enter the line here, yet the majority of the organizations had hard fighting experience before they left the British sector. On July 4, 1918, parts of the 131st and 132nd Regiments of Infantry, brigaded with Australian troops, successfully attacked Hamel and the Hamel and Vaire Woods. On August 9, the 131st Infantry, under the 58th British Division, successfully attacked Chipilly Ridge and the Gresaire Wood, an operation made especially difficult by the nature of the terrain. Towards the end of August, the division joined the First American Army in the Toul sector, remaining in reserve until September 5. On September 10, it relieved a French division in the Blercourt area, southwest of Verdun. It took part in the opening of the great Meuse-Argonne offensive, capturing the Bois-de-Forges, and occupying the sector facing the Meuse River. Beginning with October 8, it participated in the operations east of the Meuse, pressing vigorous attacks on the 11th, 12th and 13th in the vicinity of Consenvoye and the Bois de Chaume and the Bois de Plat Chene. It remained astride of the Meuse until it was relieved on October 21, during which entire period it was constantly subjected to heavy artillery and machine-gun fire from the heights of the west bank, and was continually in action. On October 26 it re-entered the line in the Troyon sector, where it took part in the attack of the Second Army, driving the enemy from the towns of St. Hilaire and Marcheville and occupying the towns of Butgneyville and Riaville. The division was advancing when hostilities ended with the armistice."

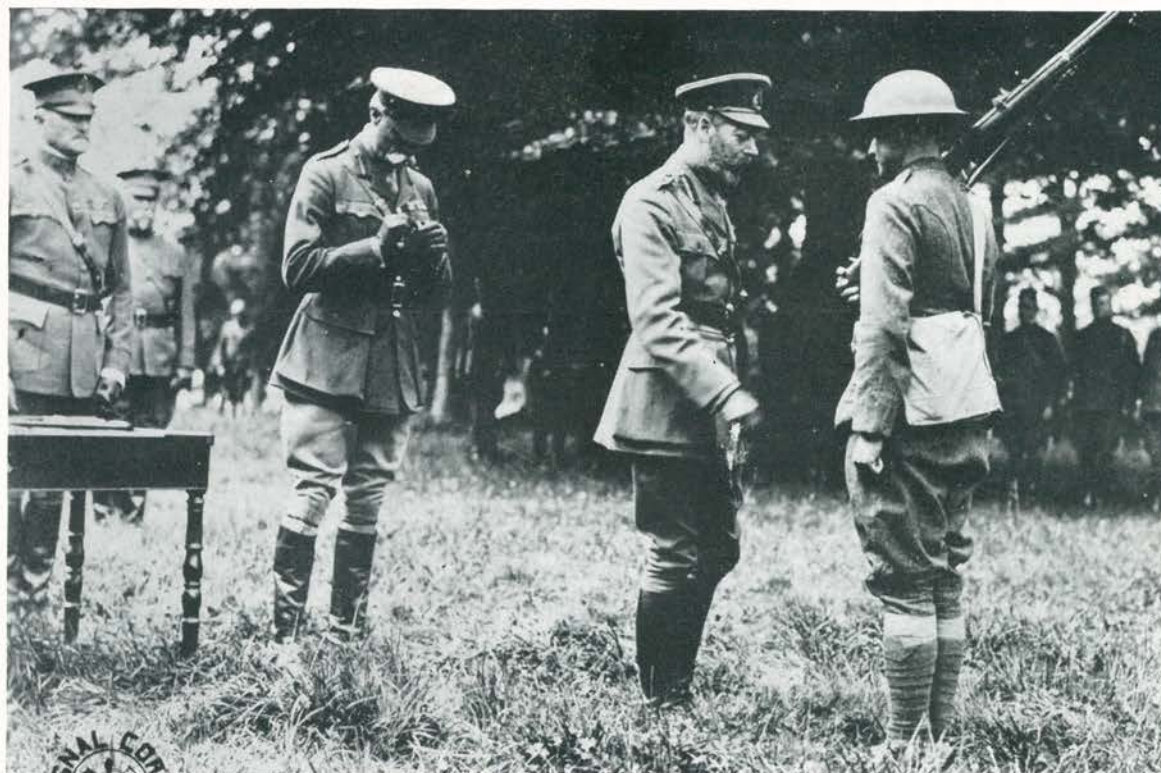

In a final message to the people of Illinois, Major General Bell said, in part: "The 33rd Division accomplished every task assigned to it, and often in less than the time allotted. Not a single failure is recorded against it. Not a scandal has occurred to mar the glory of its achievement. It is a record surpassed by none, and equaled by few."

33RD DIVISION TODAY. In 1921 the Illinois National Guard was reorganized and designated by the War Department as the 33rd Division. Since then its commanders have been Major Generals Joseph Sanborn, Milton J. Foreman, Roy D. Keehn, and Samuel T. Lawton, its present commander. At the end of 1940, the 33rd Division and attached troops were organized as follows: A major general commanding, assisted by a staff of 22 officers; two infantry brigades, each having two regiments;

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE THIRTY-THIRD DIVISION:

It is but natural, perhaps, that my thoughts should go back twenty-four years to the battlefields of France and a 33rd Division that played heroically its part in the victories of our American Armies. The veterans of that 33rd have handed down to you an inspiring record of self-sacrificing service and notable achievement. They look to you to guard it well. I know that you will do this, and I am confident also that, should you be called upon to join battle with the enemy who has challenged our existence as a free people, you will bring new glory and added fame to the grand old 33rd. My best wishes go with you always.

HEADQUARTERS SPECIAL TROOPS
33RD INFANTRY DIVISION
CAMP FORREST, TENNESSEE

To the Officers and Men of Special Troops, 33d Infantry Division.

My warmest greetings to the officers and men of Special Troops!

Its members coming from Ordnance, Signal, Infantry and Provost Marshal General's Department participate in a wide diversification of effort ranging from police work to weapon repairs. It is with pride that I point to their attention to duty; their willingness and their spirit of co-operation. With such a background this battalion cannot and will not be held back.

It is my hope that this book will provide a close bond of friendship which will be renewed each time you refer to it.

33rd MILITARY POLICE COMPANY. Badge: Same as Division Headquarters except disk is divided per chevron reversed vert and or.

33rd SIGNAL COMPANY. Badge: Same as Division Headquarters except disk is divided per chevron reversed argent (white) and tenne (orange).

108th ORDNANCE COMPANY (MM). Badge: Same as Division Headquarters except disk is divided per chevron reversed or (yellow) and gules (crimson).

The history of Special Troops, 33rd Infantry Division is a history of the individual units for the period prior to 1924.

From the standpoint of history, the 33rd Signal Company is the oldest organization of the Battalion. This company traces its ancestry prior to 1896 when several telegraph operators enlisted in Co. B of the Second Illinois Infantry and formed the nucleus of a regimental signal platoon. In 1896 it was designated Company A Signal Corps, Illinois National Guard. During the Spanish-American War it served in Puerto Rico as the Seventh Company, Signal Corps, United States Volunteers, being mustered out December 4, 1898. On June 19, 1916 the company was ordered to the Mexican border, served for 6 months and was mustered out at Fort Sheridan January 3, 1917.

On August 5, 1917, it was mustered into Federal Service in preparation for the World War and expanded into a field signal battalion. It reached Calais June 10, 1917 and participated in three offensives—Hamel, Molliers, and Meuse-Argonne. After forming a part of the Army of Occupation, the battalion returned to New York, May 24, 1919 and was demobilized.

MILITARY POLICE COMPANY

The 33rd Military Police Company traces its ancestry to the 108th Train Headquarters and Military Police Company which was formed October 10, 1917 at Camp Logan, Houston, Texas. The company sailed with the 33rd Division and landed at Brest, France, May 18, 1918.

It participated in the Somme offensive, on the Meuse-Argonne front, and in Lorraine.

In November, 1918, it was redesignated 33rd Military Police Company and ordered to Luxembourg, where it remained until ordered home. Demobilization was completed June 5, 1919.

The present company was organized and received Federal recognition October 23, 1923.

HEADQUARTERS COMPANY

When the 33rd Division was created at Camp Logan, Houston, Texas, the forerunner of the present Headquarters Company was organized as Headquarters Detachment and Headquarters Troops. It went overseas with Division Headquarters, arriving at Brest, France, May 24, 1918 and received its preliminary training in the Huppy Training Area. It returned home and was mustered out with the rest of the 33rd Division.

The present Headquarters Company was organized and received Federal Recognition December 17, 1923.

108th ORDNANCE COMPANY

This organization was organized and received Federal recognition October 29, 1923.

HEADQUARTERS SPECIAL TROOPS

In order to take care of the administration and supply of the battalion, the headquarters detachment was organized and received Federal recognition, February 25, 1924.

MEDICAL DEPARTMENT DETACHMENT

Prior to 1936, there was no medical detachment organically included in Special Troops. However, in 1936 a detachment was organized and received Federal Recognition on May 23, 1936.

SIGNAL COMPANY

The 33rd Signal Company was formed and received Federal recognition June 8, 1922.

HISTORY OF THE 65th INFANTRY BRIGADE

Badge: Approved May 12, 1930. Superimposed on a yellow cross cantoned with rays of silver forming 12 points, a gold annulet bearing on sinister side 3 heads of wheat and on dexter side 3 ears of corn, and surrounding an enameled disk of solid white, surmounted by a silver head of Abraham Lincoln.

The 65th Infantry Brigade came into being through the Tables of Organization for the 33rd Division in 1917 soon after our entrance into World War service.

The brigade, one of two infantry brigades of the 33rd Division, was composed of the 129th and 130th Infantry Regiments, both of which date back to the War of 1812.

The 129th Infantry was made up entirely of units of the old Third Regiment, Illinois Militia, organized in January, 1810. The regiment, right through changes in officer personnel and through its redesignations, has seen hard soldiering service at least once in each generation since then. Shortly after its organization, it was pressed into service to protect settlers in the Illinois Territory from Indians, incited by the British in the War of 1812.

The Black Hawk Indian Wars in 1831 caused four companies of the regiment to be called out for active service once again. In less than another generation, it was mustered into Federal service for the Mexican War (1846). Barely 20 years later, it was mustered into Federal service again for Civil War enlistment. Then, with the coming of the Spanish-American War, 1898, the Regiment was redesignated the Third Illinois Volunteers, on being mustered into Federal service for the Puerto Rican campaign.

With its exemplary service on the Mexican Border and in the World War, the Regiment's war record is complete.

The 130th Infantry Regiment, the second unit going to make up the present 65th Infantry Brigade, was originally organized in 1811 as the Fourth Illinois Militia. This unit, too, saw strenuous service in the War of 1812, largely in repelling Indians. A mere 15 years later, in 1827, it was called upon to fight off the hostile Winnebago Indians. Five years later, the Indians once more gave the Regiment trouble, for the governor of Illinois called four companies to Beardstown in the Black Hawk Wars. One of these was from Sangamon County—captained by Abraham Lincoln.

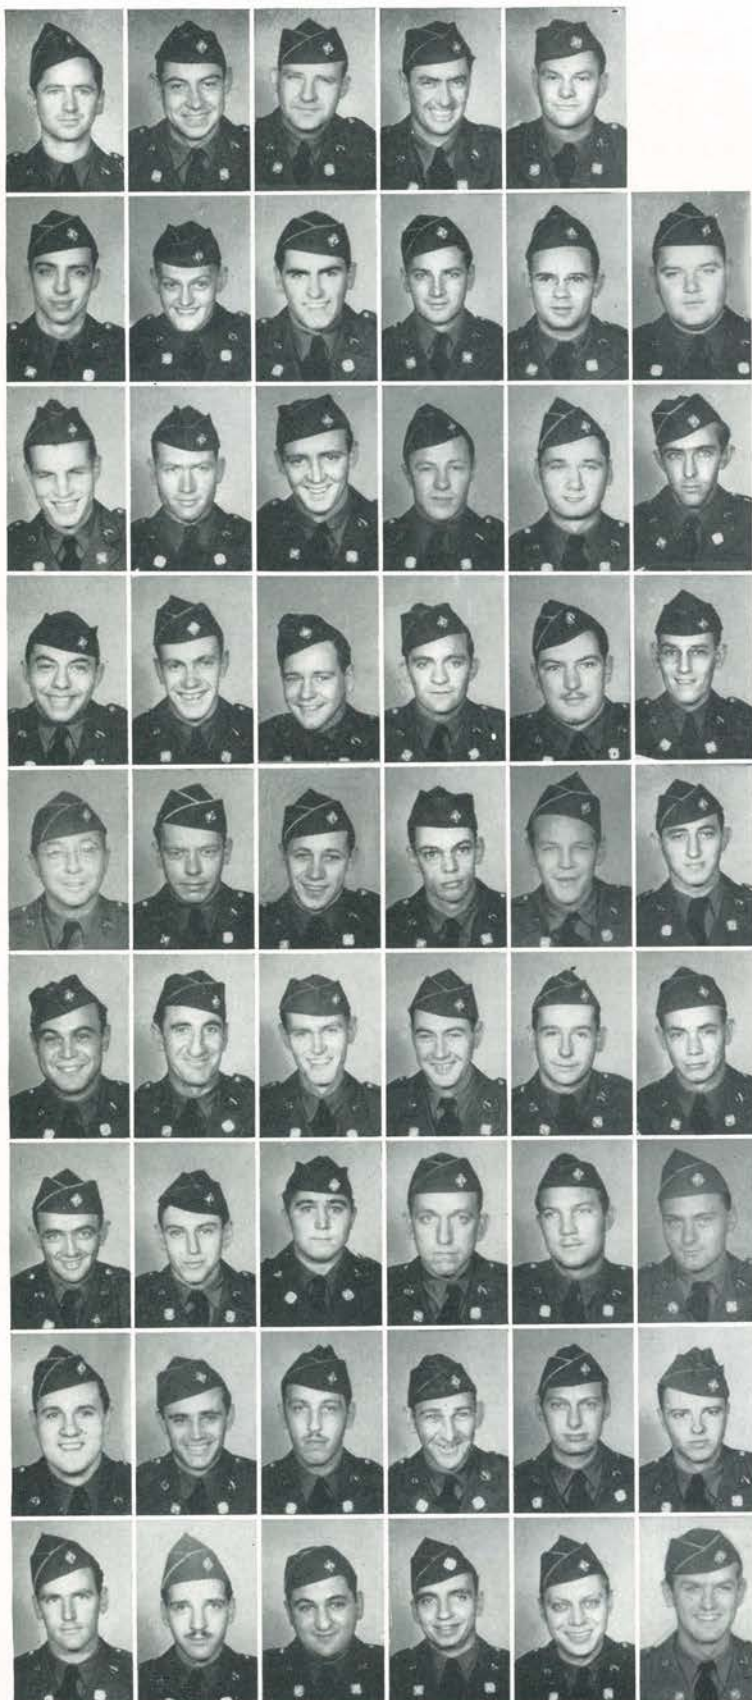

The Mexican War, the Civil War, the Spanish-American War, the Mexican Border trouble, and finally, the World War, enriched the battle tradition of the Regiment. In the first, Santa Anna's famous wooden leg was captured by a sergeant of Company G.

Of these two regiments, the 129th Infantry, commanded by Colonel Cassius Poust, originated in Northern Illinois. The 130th Infantry under command of Colonel Robert Davis, originated in Southern Illinois. Both of these Commanders served overseas with distinction.

The 65th Infantry Brigade was ordered to active duty under Executive Order No. 8863 and proceeded to Camp Forrest, Tennessee, March 5, 1941. The Brigade is commanded by Brigadier-General Diller S. Myers.

To: Members of the 129th Infantry

This permanent record of the names and faces of the officers and enlisted men now assigned to duty with the 129th Infantry will grow to be of even greater value to its possessor in the years ahead.

As citizens you have laid aside your civilian mode of life to devote your time to the defense of your country. In the months just past you have made great progress. As members of a team we all want our organization to be unshaken. If you will continue to apply yourselves with the same energy and purpose you have already shown, we will attain our objective.

As the only officer still on duty with the 129th Infantry of those officers who sailed to France with the Regiment in 1918, I can truthfully say that I believe the present organization is, at the very least, the equal in every respect of the War-Time Regiment. And, should the occasion arise, I am confident you will acquit yourselves every bit as well.

Very truly yours,

Cassius Poust
Colonel, 129th Infantry
Commanding.

HISTORY OF THE 129th INFANTRY

The shield is blue for infantry. The Spanish castle and cactus are for Spanish-American War and Mexican border service, respectively, while the four fleur-de-lis are for the World War honors of the organization, namely: Somme offensive, Meuse-Argonne, Picardy, and Lorraine.

The 129th Infantry was originally organized under the authority of the territorial government of the Territory of Illinois in 1810. It was designated the Third Regiment, Illinois Militia. Officers were commissioned, beginning with Colonel Isaac White, June 27, 1810.

June 15, 1831, four of its companies were mobilized at a camp near Rushville, Illinois, and marched to the Rock River where they took part in the Black Hawk War.

July 2, 1846, the regiment was mobilized at Alton, Illinois, under command of Colonel Ferris Foreman, and was mustered into the service of the United States for the Mexican War. It was brigaded with the Fourth Regiment, Illinois Militia, and placed in General Paterson's Division. It was mustered out of the service May 25, 1847.

At the outbreak of the Civil War, the first regiment called to service was numbered the Seventh, because the first to sixth numbers had served in the Mexican War. The regiment was mobilized at Pontiac, Illinois, and was mustered into the service September 8, 1862, under the command of Colonel George P. Smith. It participated in various campaigns, and was mustered out June 10, 1865.

After the Civil War, separate companies of the old regiment were reorganized and were known by names relating to the cities in which they were located, and on December 21, 1875, were reformed into and designated the Third Regiment, Illinois National Guard.

May 7, 1898, the regiment was mustered into service as the Third Illinois Volunteers, for the Spanish-American War. After taking part in the Puerto Rican Campaign, it was mustered out January 24, 1898. It was reorganized as the Third Regiment, Illinois National Guard, under command of Colonel Arthur E. Fisher, of Rockford, Illinois. Colonel Fisher was succeeded in 1905 by Colonel Richings J. Shand, also of Rockford, Illinois; and he by Colonel Charles H. Greene, of Aurora, Illinois, in 1910.

June 19, 1916, the regiment, as the Third Illinois Infantry, under Colonel Greene, was mustered for duty on the Mexican Border. It was mustered out February 21, 1917. It was reorganized in the service of the Illinois National Guard, and was mustered into service for the World War under Colonel Greene, July 28, 1917. It trained at Camp Logan, Houston, Texas, under Colonels Greene, Matthew C. Smith, and Charles H. Payne, was redesignated the 129th Infantry, and May 2, 1918, entrained for its journey to France. The regiment took part in the following major offensives: Amiens, Verdun-Frommerville, Meuse-Argonne and Troyon. In July, 1918, Colonel Edgar A. Myer succeeded Colonel Greene in command. The regiment remained as part of the Army of Occupation after the Armistice, until May, 1919, when it returned to the United States. It was mustered out June 6, 1919, at Camp Grant, Illinois.

Regimental reorganization was commenced in 1921 under command of Colonel Diller S. Myers, of Pontiac, Illinois. The regiment was redesignated 129th Infantry, National Guard of the United States, and was again assigned to the 65th Brigade, 33rd Division. Colonel William F. Hemenway, of Sycamore, Illinois, in 1930, succeeded Colonel Myers, who had been promoted to command the 65th Brigade. He served until his retirement as a Brigadier General early in 1939, when Lieutenant Colonel Cassius Poust, of Sycamore, Illinois, the present Regimental Commander, was promoted to Colonel. All three Regimental Commanders since the World War were active officers of the regiment throughout its World War Service.

The Regiment has participated in all annual field training periods of the 33rd Division, including the Second Army maneuvers in Michigan in 1936 and in Wisconsin in 1940.

Date of induction—March 5, 1941. Arrived at Camp Forrest, Tennessee, on March 20, 1941.

QUEENIE (Mascot)

HEADQUARTERS 130TH INFANTRY
CAMP FORREST, TENNESSEE

December 26, 1941.

TO : Officers and men of the 130th Infantry.

The "Thirty-Third Infantry Division Pictorial History" affords me a splendid opportunity to say to the officers and men what I have stated many times to those interested in the training of this regiment. This opportunity is afforded me to spread upon the pages of this record, commendation for the excellent manner in which all officers and men of this regiment have applied themselves during this intensive training program. The results attained thus far are highly satisfactory. There is still much work before us and many things to be ironed out, but I am fully confident in your ability to advance into the progress of highly specialized training with the same amount of high spirit and skill already demonstrated.

To those who have been sent to us to be trained under the National Selective Service Act, I wish particularly to commend you for the manner in which you have successfully crossed the gap between civilian life and the rigors and exacting demands of a soldier in field training.

I hope you will keep this book and refer to it in later years with a fond memory and recollection of your services to this country as a member of the 130th Infantry. The 130th Infantry has an excellent record during World War I, and I hope that we will all be able to maintain this record throughout the war which is now thrust upon us.

Yours very truly,

Robert W. Davis
ROBERT W. DAVIS,

HISTORY OF THE 130th INFANTRY

Shield: Argent, a fess gules, of the first, and vert fesswise between in chief two arrows of the second saltirewise behind a black hawk proper and in base a fleur-de-lis of the second: over all a saltire azure.

Crest: That for the regiments of the Illinois National Guard: On a wreath argent and azure the blockhouse of Old Fort Dearborn proper.

Motto: Always ready.

Description: The shield is white, the old Infantry color. Service in the Black Hawk War is symbolized by the black hawk and the two red arrows. Service in the Mexican War by the horizontal belt across the shield of red, white and green, the colors of the Mexican flag. The Civil War service is indicated by the blue saltire cross from the Confederate flag. The service in France during the World War is indicated by the fleur-de-lis.

The Fourth Regiment of the Illinois Militia was organized during the administration of Governor Ninian Edwards. Served as such in the Federal Service October 14th to November 5th, 1812; again in the Black Hawk War, April 21st to May 27th, 1832; in the Mexican War from June 5th, 1846, to May 23rd, 1847, and answered the call of the President for volunteers in 1861, being mustered into the service April 29th as the 10th Regiment, Illinois Volunteer Infantry, this designation being given by Act of the Illinois Legislature which met April 23rd, 1861, as a mark of deference to the Mexican War Service.

Upon reorganization of the State Militia after the Civil War this regiment was reorganized in the same territory and given the same name as the original organization.

This regiment served during the Spanish-American War as the Fourth Regiment, Illinois Volunteer Infantry, from April 26th, 1898, to May 2nd, 1899.

In the Mexican Border Service, served as the Fourth Infantry, Illinois National Guard, from June 27th, 1916, to March 15, 1917.

In the World War this regiment was mustered into the Federal Service as the Fourth Infantry, Illinois National Guard, and subsequently the 130th Infantry, 33rd Division, and was in the United States Service from July 25th, 1917 to May 31st, 1919.

Reorganized as the Fourth Infantry, Illinois National Guard, 1921. The Fourth and Fifth Regiments, Illinois National Guard, consolidated under the name of the Fourth Infantry, Illinois National Guard, June 22nd, 1921, Special Orders No. 74, AGO of Illinois.

The Colors of the 130th Infantry are decorated with Streamers of eight campaigns and the regiment has participated with distinction in twenty-eight battles and engagements.

STATE SERVICE

This regiment has served the State of Illinois, under official call of the Governor, during disorders and disasters, a far greater number of occasions than any other regiment of the Illinois National Guard, and as far as records are available, the regiment has had more service of this kind than any other National Guard regiment within the United States. During the years of 1932-33, units of the regiment were continuously on duty in Sangamon and Christian counties for a period of fourteen months. Its most recent duty of this kind was during the flood in southern Illinois from January 21 to April 5th, 1937, during which duty the officers and men of the regiment distinguished themselves with honor to the regiment and to the National Guard of Illinois.

ALBERT L. CULBERTSON
BRIGADIER GENERAL
U. S. A.

COMMANDING THE 66th INFANTRY BRIGADE

Born June 1, 1884, at Delavan, Illinois. Enlisted as a Private in Company K, 5th Infantry, Illinois National Guard, on June 18, 1904. Commissioned 2nd Lieutenant, October 1, 1904. Appointed 1st Lieutenant, January 1, 1912, and promoted to Captain the following year, on November 25th. Entered Federal service at the call of the President, March 27, 1917. Graduated from Infantry School of Small Arms at Fort Sill, in August that same year. Commanded Company K, Fifth Infantry (a part of the newly-organized 123rd Machine Gun Battalion) during its entire service in the American Expeditionary Force. Commissioned Major, January 3, 1918. Graduated from the Machine Gun School in March of that year.

While overseas, his command distinguished themselves in the Somme offensive, the Meuse-Argonne, and in Picardy and Lorraine. Was decorated with the Silver Star and the Order of the Purple Heart.

Upon returning to the United States, was discharged from service May 31, 1919. Re-entered the Illinois National Guard on December 7, 1921, as Major. Reorganized the 130th Infantry Regiment and became Colonel of that Regiment on March 9, 1922. Served on the War Department General Staff from August 18, 1922, until May 6, 1923. Was graduated from the G-2 Course in the Army War College in 1926, and in 1927 from the Command and General Staff School at Fort Leavenworth. Returned to Washington in 1929 to serve as Chief of the Regulation Division of the National Guard Bureau until 1933. Was promoted to Brigadier General on May 14, 1940, and assigned to command the 66th Infantry Brigade.

HISTORY OF THE 66th INFANTRY BRIGADE

Badge: Approved May 12, 1930. Superimposed on a yellow cross cantoned with rays of silver forming 12 points, a gold annulet bearing on sinister side three heads of wheat and on dexter side three ears of corn, and surrounding an enameled disk of solid blue, surmounted by a silver head of Abraham Lincoln.

HISTORY OF THE 66TH INFANTRY BRIGADE

When the 33rd Infantry Division was organized at Camp Logan, Houston, Texas, in 1917, the 1st Brigade consisting of the 1st Illinois and 2nd Illinois Regiments, and commanded by Brigadier General D. Jack Foster, became the 66th Infantry Brigade, by General Order, 33rd Division, dated October 9, 1917. The 1st Illinois Regiment, known as the "Dandy First," was formed in 1874 and the 2nd Illinois Regiment was formed in 1875. The regiments were re-designated the 131st and 132nd Infantry Regiments, respectively, and the 124th Machine Gun Battalion (made up of Companies C and D, 5th Infantry and the Machine Gun Company 7th Infantry, with later Company C, 122nd Machine Gun Battalion, Company C, 5th Infantry) added to complete the Brigade.

When General Foster retired because of ill health, Brigadier General Paul A. Wolf of the Regular Army was assigned to command in March, 1918. He took the Brigade overseas in May, 1918, commanded it during all its active operations and brought it back to the United States when it was mustered out in 1919.

After a period of seasoning back of British sector near Amiens, four Companies of the 66th Infantry Brigade participated with the Australians in the capture of Hamel, July 4, 1918. In August the 131st Infantry fought at Chippilly Ridge and Gussaire Woods. The Brigade participated in the Somme Offensive of 1918 and held defensive Sector in Picardy. After leaving the British Sector late in August, the Brigade as a part of the First American Army took over the Famous Dead Man's Hill Sector north of Verdun and in the Meuse-Argonne Offensive as the extreme right of the First Army on September 26 captured Forges Wood, "an exceptionally formidable position bristling with machine guns, which successfully had defied the French, and which the Germans boasted never could be taken by direct assault." On October 7th, units of the Brigade participated in the crossing of the Meuse at Consenvoye and the actions east of the Meuse. Upon being relieved from the Meuse-Argonne action on October 24th after almost a month of hard fighting, the Brigade saw action in the St. Mihiel Salient where it was engaged in the operation of the Second American Army against Metz where the Armistice put an end to active combat.

Following the Armistice the Brigade was stationed in Luxembourg as a part of the Army of Occupation during the Winter of 1918-1919, returned to the United States in May, 1919, and was mustered out of service of the United States at Camp Grant, Rockford, Illinois.

Upon the re-organization of the Illinois National Guard in June, 1920, Brigadier General Abel Davis, war time Commander of the 132nd Infantry, became Commander; he was succeeded upon his retirement in September, 1930, by Brigadier General John J. Garrity, who in turn retired for age in 1933 and was succeeded by Brigadier General Thomas S. Hammond who resigned in May, 1940, when the present Commander, Brigadier General Albert L. Culbertson, was assigned.

131st INFANTRY
Camp Forrest, Tenn.

GREETINGS to the Officers and Men of the ONE HUNDRED and THIRTY-FIRST INFANTRY whose names and pictures adorn the pages of this book. I am pleased and proud to be one of you.

Your military efficiency, your devotion to duty and your self-sacrificing spirit especially during the maneuvers, has been most praiseworthy. You have been called upon for greater and greater efforts and your work has been increasingly difficult but your response and your loyalty has merited the highest commendation.

I know that every one of you are as deeply proud as I am of this great organization of ours and your pride will grow as this Regiment takes a more and more important part in the defense forces of our country.

It is a great privilege and a high honor to be your Commanding Officer.

Yours most sincerely

HISTORY OF THE 131st INFANTRY

BLAZONRY

Shield: Azure, a closet between two wavy barrulets, surmounted by a pairle argent, over all the old insignia of the First Infantry, Illinois National Guard. (Wheel within a diamond) proper; in chief four fleur-de-lis, three and one, of the second.

Crest: That for regiments of Illinois National Guard.

Motto: Ducit Amor Patriae (Led by love of country).

DESCRIPTION

The shield is blue—the present Infantry color—and the main charges are silver or white—the old Infantry facing color. The pairle is taken from the Chicago seal; the first wavy barrulet represents Spanish War service; the closet Mexican Border duty, and the second wavy barrulet represents the second time the organization was in Federal service overseas; the four fleur-de-lis represent the engagement during the World War; the charge in the fess point is the insignia of the old First Infantry, Illinois National Guard.

The organization of the 131st Infantry, then known as the First Infantry was started in August, 1874, and completed December 21, 1875. Later it was redesignated as the First Illinois Volunteers.

The following Colonels have commanded the regiment in turn: Price G. Sherman, A. C. McClurg, George R. Davis, Wm. G. Sherer, Act., Edgar D. Swain, Charles Fitzsimmons, E. B. Knox, C. R. E. Koch, Henry L. Turner, Joseph B. Sanborn, Anson L. Bolte, Francis M. Allen, John M. Richmond, and Andrew T. McAnsh, present Commander.

The regiment participated in the quelling of seven instances of uprisings throughout Illinois, and has represented the state at seven celebrations, as follows: World Columbian Exposition, Atlanta Exposition, Pan-American Exposition, Louisiana Purchase Exposition, Illinois Soldiers' Monument Dedication, Crown Point Auto Races, and the Panama-Pacific Exposition.

The regiment's record in the World War is memorable. It served along the entire front in the following armies and corps: First, Second and Third American Armies; Second, Third, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, Seventh, Eighth and Ninth American Corps; Fourth Army, British E. F.; 19th and 111th British Corps; Fourth Australian Corps; Second French Army, 17th French Corps, and 11th French Colonial Corps. Twenty-four engagements and local operations are recorded; 13 officers and 262 men killed in action; 62 officers and 2,245 men wounded or gassed; two officers and 17 men were captured by the enemy and returned after the Armistice.

The advances gained by the regiment total 24,615 meters; 12 German officers and 2,088 other ranks were captured, as were five pieces of heavy artillery, 57 pieces of light artillery, six trench mortars, 210 machine guns, 266 rifles and one German airplane.

Also captured were thousands of high explosive shells, and enormous quantities of material, including a complete narrow gauge railroad, hand grenades, lumber, ambulances, signals, Lewis guns, clothing and other articles used by the Germans.

Decorations received by members of the regiment consist of 87 American medals, 45 British, 32 French and nine Belgian, a total of 173, and about 200 citations for meritorious conduct.

The official record of the regiment is as follows: Organized as First Infantry, December 21, 1875; Federal military service (Spanish War), May 13, 1898; redesignated First Illinois Volunteers; served in Cuba July 9, 1898, to August 25, 1898; mustered out November 17, 1898. Federal military service (Mexican Border), June 21, 1916; served at Camp Wilson, San Antonio, Texas; mustered out October 4, 1916. Federal military service (World War), April 4, 1917; drafted August 5, 1917; redesignated 131st Infantry, October 10, 1917; arrived France, May 30, 1918; served with British, American and French armies; mustered out June 6, 1919. Reorganized as First Infantry, 1919; redesignated 131st Infantry, December 13, 1921. Inducted into Federal service on March 5, 1941 as the 131st Infantry.

HEADQUARTERS, 132ND INFANTRY
CAMP FOREST, TENNESSEE

15 December, 1941.

TO ALL OFFICERS AND MEN OF THE 132ND INFANTRY:

It has been a privilege to command this regiment for the last three months in the absence of Colonel Nelson, and I feel that the 33rd Division Pictorial Review being prepared now with the photographs and historical data of the various units comprising the regiment is most appropriate and will be a means of recalling many pleasant and interesting experiences in time to come.

The intensive training so competently pursued by our regiment and the fine spirit and demonstration of combat efficiency illustrated during the recent maneuvers clearly indicates that we have developed a real fighting team. After a little polishing no adversary will find us lacking.

I am confident that every one of you, regardless of your origin before becoming a part of the 132nd Infantry, will always have a pleasant remembrance of the many "buddies" you have made in the past fraction of a year and if I may add, Colonel Nelson will have good cause to feel proud of his regiment and will have a warm spot in his heart for everyone of you long after our important mission to the United States of America has been successfully accomplished.

Sincerely yours,

A. F. CASPER,
Lt. Col., Infantry,
Commanding.

LEROY C. NELSON

COLONEL

U. S. A.

HISTORY OF THE 132nd INFANTRY

SHIELD: Argent, a pairle azure between in chief an oak tree proper within a circle of 5 mullets gules, a palm tree to dexter and a prickly pear cactus to sinister both of the third.

CREST: That for regiments of Illinois National Guard.

WREATH: Argent and azure.

MOTTO: Semper Paratus (Ever ready).

DESCRIPTION: The shield is white charged with the pairle which appears on the shield of the city of Chicago, shield and pairle are white and blue, the Infantry colors. The green oak tree is for Forges Wood and the stars represent the five major operations in which the regiment took part in France. The palm tree recalls Cuban and the cactus the Mexican border service.

The 132nd Infantry, whose home station prior to March 22, 1941, was at Chicago, Illinois, was organized in 1875 when Chicago was being rebuilt after the "Great Fire." The original units were known as the Clan-a-Gael Guards, the Emmett Guards, the Mulligan Guards, the Ellsworth Zouaves, and the Alpine Hunters. These organizations became Companies A, B, C, D, E, and F, and constituted a battalion of the Second Infantry.

Companies G and H were mustered early in 1876, completing the regiment of two battalions. John T. Torrence was commissioned as the first Colonel to rank from September 29, 1875.

July 1, 1877, the guard became a part of the First Brigade and designated Second Infantry, Illinois National Guard.

Early in 1877 the Sixth Battalion, an organization of four companies, was consolidated with the regiment.

On April 25, 1898, it received its call for service in the Spanish-American War, being mustered into Federal Service on May 16, 1898.

The regiment established itself at Camp Cuba Libre, Jacksonville, Florida, and embarked for Cuba on December 10, 1898. Evacuation of the Second Regiment from Cuba began March 28, 1899, and it was mustered out April 26, 1899.

The regiment was formally inducted into Federal Service on June 25, 1916, for duty on the Mexican border. It remained in Texas until September 3, 1916, then returned to Springfield, being mustered out of Federal Service on October 5, 1916. While Companies B, G, I, K, L, and M were on riot duty at East St. Louis, the regiment was called out for World War service. Proceeding to Camp Logan, Texas, and arriving September 12, 1917, the Second Regiment was redesignated as the 132nd Infantry, 66th Brigade, 33rd Division, U. S. Army, effective October 11, 1917, and is its official designation at this time.

The regiment arrived in Brest, France, May 24, 1918, and received its baptism of fire at Hamel on July 4. It participated in the following engagements: Amiens, July 17-August 5; Somme Offensive, August 8-20; Verdun-Frommerville, September 8-25; Meuse-Argonne, September 26-October 21; Troyon, October 25-November 11. It also participated in several minor actions. Ten officers and 250 men of the regiment were killed in action in France, and 30 officers and 1087 men were wounded. Among the many decorations awarded members of the regiment by the United States Government are five Congressional Medals of Honor, 54 Distinguished Service Crosses. In addition, the governments of England, France, Italy, and Belgium have awarded numerous decorations to members of the 132nd Infantry.

The 132nd Infantry was demobilized at Camp Grant, Illinois. In 1920 the regiment was again reorganized as the Second Infantry, I. N. G. The redesignation of the regiment as the 132nd Infantry, 66th Brigade, 33rd Division, Illinois National Guard, came on December 31, 1921.

As a component of the 33rd Division, the 132nd Infantry has participated in encampments at Camp Grant, Illinois, and participated in the Second Army maneuvers in Michigan in 1936 and at Sparta, Wisconsin, in 1940.

No history of the regiment would be complete without mentioning the names of the commanders who have helped make this regiment famous. Their names will bring back memories to many former members who are residing in all parts of the United States. In tribute to the leaders of the 132nd Infantry, we salute:

Colonel Joseph T. Torrence, in command September 29, 1875-July 23, 1877.

Colonel James Quirk, in command July 23, 1877-July 17, 1882.

Colonel William Hale Tompson, Sr., in command July 17, 1882-June 11, 1884.

Colonel Harris A. Wheeler, in command June 11, 1884-January 31, 1890.

Colonel Florenz Ziegfeld, in command January 31, 1890-July 1, 1890.

Colonel Louis S. Judd, in command July 1, 1890-February 17, 1894.

Colonel George M. Moulton, in command February 17, 1894-July 6, 1899.

Colonel James E. Stuart, in command July 6, 1899-July 17, 1907.

Colonel John J. Garrity, in command July 17, 1907-December 21, 1917.

Colonel George E. Houle, in command January 1, 1918-March 13, 1918.

Colonel Abel Davis, in command March 13, 1918-August 20, 1920.

Colonel William E. Swanson, in command August 20, 1920-July 27, 1925.

Lieutenant Colonel Nelson Morris, in command July 27, 1925-December 3, 1925.

Colonel Fred E. Rand, in command December 3, 1925-November 15, 1930.

Colonel Charles H. Davis, in command November 15, 1930-July 3, 1934.

Colonel Herbert E. Algeo, in command July 3, 1934-March 9, 1937.

Colonel Leroy E. Nelson, assumed command on March 9, 1937.

HEADQUARTERS 58th F. A. BRIGADE
Office of the Commanding General
Camp Forrest, Tennessee

December 12, 1941

To the Members of the 58th Field Artillery Brigade

Our nation is now at war.

In this solemn moment it is a privilege to commend you for your devotion to duty during the intensive training period. Even greater effort should now be made by each of us, day and night, to perfect ourselves in every technical detail of our duties, and above all to prepare ourselves in spirit and physique for the arduous days ahead.

This Brigade achieved a glorious history in the days of 1917-18. I know you will carry on in the tradition of those who preceded you.

Faithfully yours,

Charles C. Haffner Jr
CHARLES C. HAFFNER, JR.

HISTORY OF THE

58th FIELD ARTILLERY BRIGADE

HERALDRY

Badge: Approved 12 May, 30. Superimposed on a yellow cross cantoned with rays of silver forming 12 points, a gold annulet bearing on sinister side 3 heads of wheat and on dexter side 3 ears of corn, and surrounding an enameled disk of solid red, surmounted by a silver head of Abraham Lincoln.

The 58th Field Artillery Brigade had its origin in the World War, with the assignment of three Illinois field artillery regiments, the 122nd, the 123rd and the 124th.

The brigade was commanded during the first World War by Brigadier General Henry D. Todd and since the war successively by Brigadier Generals Milton J. Foreman, Frank R. Schwengel, Samuel T. Lawton, and Charles C. Haffner, Jr.

The old Illinois First Cavalry was converted into a field artillery regiment before leaving Chicago in 1917 for field training in Texas, and designated the 122nd. Organized as a squadron of cavalry in 1894, it became a full cavalry regiment in 1898, for volunteer service in the Spanish-American War.

The 123rd Field Artillery was converted from the old Sixth Illinois Infantry units.

And the 124th Field Artillery, third of the Brigade's components, had as its nucleus three downstate troops of the old First Cavalry located in Springfield and Urbana.

Serving in the World War as a Divisional artillery brigade, the 58th saw no action with its mother Division, the 33rd, but supported from time to time the infantry of five other Infantry Divisions.

Since the first World War the two light field artillery regiments, the 122nd and 124th, have had their home stations in Chicago. The medium regiment, the 123rd, was quartered in downstate communities.

The 58th F. A. Brigade was inducted into federal service as part of the 33rd Infantry Division on March 5, 1941, and ordered to Camp Forrest, Tennessee, its present station.

Regimental Commanders, as of December 8, 1941, were Colonel Robert E. Myhrman, the 122nd; Colonel Dell B. Hardin, the 123rd; and Colonel Fred B. Skeates, the 124th. Colonel Robert E. Myhrman ended his distinguished service with his regiment on December 9, 1941, being transferred, due to the provisions of age in grade regulations and is succeeded by Lt. Colonel George Marquardt of the 122nd F. A.

HEADQUARTERS 122ND FIELD ARTILLERY
Office of the Commanding Officer
Camp Forrest, Tennessee

To The Officers and Men of The 122nd Field Artillery

It is with the greatest personal pleasure that I take advantage of this opportunity to commend both officers and men of the 122nd Field Artillery for their zeal, hard work, devotion to duty and fine spirit of loyalty as displayed not only during the arduous training period but also during the Second Army Maneuvers.

In training and in housekeeping the Regiment has shown fine progress since the day of induction, but there still is room for improvement and there is still a big job ahead.

I have the fullest confidence in you, and it is my firm personal conviction that you will live up to the fine traditions of your Regiment and that you will render a splendid account of yourselves in any task you may be called upon to perform.

Sincerely,

Robert E. Myhrman

HISTORY OF THE 122nd FIELD ARTILLERY

The white Y denotes its origin, Chicago. The red and yellow chevron denotes its Service in the Spanish-American War, 1898. The Cacti on a yellow field denote its Mexican Service as cavalry in 1916. The red indicates the branch of service (artillery) and the three Fleur de Lis denote its three major engagements in France during the World War, 1918. The motto "Prompti et Parati" (Ready and Prepared).

The 122nd Field Artillery is the direct successor to the Chicago units of the 1st Illinois Cavalry and dates back to the Civil War.

On July 1st, 1861, the First Illinois Volunteer Cavalry was mustered into service for the Civil War under the command of Col. Thomas A. Marshall. It served with distinction in several engagements in Missouri.

In 1891 the organization was again formed as troops of a cavalry squadron and continued as such until 1897. During the Spanish-American War it was expanded to a regiment and re-designated the First Illinois Volunteer Cavalry. Mustered into Federal service on April 25, 1898, the regiment trained at Springfield, Illinois; Chickamauga, Georgia, and Lookout Mountain, Tennessee, and was mustered out of service at Fort Sheridan on October 11, 1898.

Col. Milton J. Foreman succeeded to command of the regiment in 1906. Federal service came again when the regiment was mustered into service June 27, 1916, and detailed to the Rio Grande Valley with headquarters in Brownsville, Texas. The regiment distinguished itself, in spite of adverse conditions, for its general appearance and exemplary discipline during its service on the Mexican Border. On returning to Illinois it reverted to state status upon being mustered out November 16, 1916, at Fort Sheridan.

During the World War, the First Cavalry was re-designated the 2nd Field Artillery, Illinois National Guard, on July 1st, 1917, and joined the 33rd Division at Camp Logan, Texas. Here its name was again changed to the 122nd Field Artillery on September 21, 1917.

Col. Foreman led his regiment to Hoboken, New Jersey, and on May 25, 1918, it sailed on the transport "Kashmir" for France.

While in France, the regiment trained for European Artillery Combat at the French Artillery School at Valdahon, in the foothills of the French Alps.

On August 21, 1918, the regiment moved to the front taking positions in the Foret de la Reine. Four days later it advanced to a position in the Toul Defensive Sector, supporting the 89th Division of the 4th U. S. Army Corps. The positions occupied were in the vicinity of the towns of Bouconville, Rambucourt and Beaumont. Previous to the opening of the St. Mihiel Offensive, the regiment echeloned forward and the 1st Division took over the 89th Division's sector. During the offensive the regiment supported the 16th Infantry of the 1st Division.

Mont Sec, a strongly fortified high hill, key of the defense, fell to the 1st Division. On September 14th, from positions in the vicinity of Nonsard, the regiment started a 6 day march to the Foret Argonne, in preparation for the coming battle of the Meuse-Argonne. On September 26th, from positions near the ancient town of Avocourt, the regiment supported the attack of the 91st Division which was flanked by the 35th Division on the left and the 37th Division on the right. The advance of the American Army saw the regiment occupying positions in the vicinity of the town of Epinonville.

The night of October 4th, the 32nd Division relieved the 91st Division, and the regiment continued in support of the 32nd Division.

The 32nd Division supported by the 122nd advanced, attacked and captured the sector of Kriemhilde Stellung, North of Gesnes and the town of Romagne.

On October 11, 1918, the regiment was relieved and ordered to Jubecourt for re-equipment and replacement of men and horses.

On October 22, the regiment returned to the front lines and took position in the vicinity of the towns of Romagne and Gesnes, while the 32nd Division was relieved by the 89th Division.

Preparations for the final offensive were made, which was launched at daybreak, November 1, 1918. The regiment was in direct support of the 177th Brigade of the 89th Division. November 3rd carried the regiment beyond Nouart, and a night march on November 4th found the regiment covering ground below the Meuse River. On November 5th the regiment was in position on the heights overlooking the Meuse, in front of the town of Pouilly, between the cities of Stenay and Sedan. These cities were important battle fields of the Franco-Prussian War in 1870.

On the night of November 10th, orders were received to cover the advance of the 178th Infantry Brigade of the 89th Division, across the Meuse River.

The infantry started to cross on pontoon bridges at 8 P. M. The 122nd Field Artillery covered the building of the pontoon bridges in the advance and the infantry operations resulting in the securing of the bridgehead and town of Pouilly. The regiment continued the support of the infantry by heavy fire until 11 A. M., the armistice hour, on November 11, 1918.

Promptly at 11 A. M., all firing ceased. A deathlike silence prevailed. The guns still pointed to fire at the enemy but the muzzles were covered and the caissons were closed. Cannoneers lay sprawled under tarpaulins in much needed sleep while the drivers led worn horses from wet, cold woods into open ground to graze.

The armistice brought no wild cheering on the lines, no scenes of enthusiasm, just another day in the Army. Men

HEADQUARTERS
123rd Field Artillery

Camp Forrest, Tennessee
10 December 1941

TO : The Officers and Men of the 123rd Field Artillery.

The 33rd Infantry-Division Pictorial Review affords me a splendid opportunity to say to every one of you individually what I have stated many times to those interested in the training of this Regiment. The opportunity is thus afforded me to spread upon the pages of this record commendations for the excellent manner in which you, all of you, officers and men, have applied yourself during the intensive training program and participation in 2nd Army maneuvers. The results attained thus far are highly satisfactory. It is true, there is much work before us, many things to be ironed out, but I am fully confident in your ability to advance into the program of highly specialized training with the same amount of high spirit and skill already demonstrated.

To those of you who have come to us to be trained under the Selective Service Act, I wish particularly to commend you for the manner in which you have successfully bridged the gap between civilian life and the rigorous and exacting demands of the soldier in training.

May you keep this book and refer to it in later years with fond memory and recollections of your tour of duty as a member of the 123rd Field Artillery.

Sincerely yours,

Dell B. Hardin

HISTORY OF THE 123rd FIELD ARTILLERY

COAT OF ARMS

Gules, a chevron azure fimbriated or between three fleurs-de-lis and a lamb couchant of the third.

MOTTO

Parati et Volentes. (Ready and Willing.)

The shield is red for Artillery. The blue chevron alludes to the Infantry origin and the ability with which the regiment always obtained its objective. The three fleurs-de-lis symbolize the three major engagements in which the 123rd Field Artillery participated during the World War—Lucey (Lorraine) Sector, St. Mihiel Offensive, and Meuse-Argonne Offensive. The lamb is taken from the seal of Porto Rico and signifies service during the Spanish-American War.

The 6th Regiment, Infantry, Illinois National Guard, was immediately reorganized, Companies being located in the same cities and towns as formerly. The same Company Commanders, and a majority of the Company Officers were retained with the reorganization. The Regiment continued in State Service until March 26, 1917.

During the intervening years, and prior to March, 1917, the following changes were made within the regiment: Company K (LaMoille) changed location to Kewanee; Company D (Abingdon) changed location to Oak Park; Company M (Galena) changed location to Chicago Heights; The Band was organized at Sterling, later being relocated at Monmouth, and early in 1917 was relocated at Galesburg; Company B (Geneseo) was redesignated Machine Gun Company, and a new Company B was organized at Aledo; later the Supply Company was organized at Galena; Headquarters Company and the Medical Detachment were also added.

The 6th Regiment, Infantry, Ill. N. G., or various companies thereof, was on active duty within the State during the years: 1886, 1889, 1893, 1894, 1910, 1912, 1916, and 1917.

The 6th Regiment, Infantry, Ill. N. G., was mustered into the Federal Service on March 26, 1917 for active duty and placed on local guard duty (Rock Island Arsenal, Rantoul Air Field, Springfield and East St. Louis). Moved to Camp Logan, Texas in September, 1917. The Regiment (Less M. G. Co., which became the 108th Trench Mortar Battery) was redesignated the 123rd (Heavy) Field Artillery, 58th F. A. Brigade, 33rd Division on September 19, 1917.

The 123rd Field Artillery sailed from Hoboken, N. J., May 27, 1918, on HMS Scotian, and arrived at Liverpool, England on June 8, 1918; left England on June 11, 1918 and arrived in France on June 12, 1918; served in the Lucey (Lorraine) Sector from August 26, 1918 to September 11, 1918 in support of the 89th (US) Division; and later the 1st (US) Division; supported the 1st (US) Division in the St. Mihiel Offensive from September 12-15, 1918; moved to the area of the Second French Army and entered the Meuse-Argonne Offensive in support of the 91st (US) Division on September 26, 1918; the 91st (US) Division was relieved by the 32nd (US) Division on October 7, 1918, but the 123rd Field Artillery remained in their support until October 15, 1918, when the regiment was relieved and sent to a rest area. The regiment served in the American Army of Occupation, with the 33rd Division, until April 29, 1919; left France on the U.S.S. America, on arriving at New York on May 24, 1919. The regiment was disbanded at Camp Grant, Illinois on June 9, 1919.

The First Battalion, 123rd Field Artillery, Ill. N. G., was reorganized in 1921, by Major James B. Bereth of Monmouth, units being located as follows:

Headquarters, 1st Bn.	Monmouth
1st Bn. Hq. Btry. & C. Tn.	Monmouth
Battery A	Galesburg
Battery B	Monmouth

and by General Order No. 38, Military and Naval Department of Illinois, dated November 17, 1927, was reconstituted to perpetuate the World War, 123rd Field Artillery, (formerly the 6th Regiment, Infantry, Ill. N. G.)

The First Battalion, 123rd Field Artillery, Ill. N. G., continued in State Service, under the command of Major Bereth until July, 1925, then under command of Major Dell B. Hardin of Monmouth until May, 1936. Units of the 1st Bn. 123rd F. A., Ill. N. G., were on active state duty in 1922 and 1933.

FACTUAL HISTORY

The 123rd Field Artillery, Illinois National Guard, had its origin in the 6th Regiment, Infantry, Ill. N. G., which was organized on May 4, 1882, from existing Companies of the 4th and 7th Regiments of Infantry and the 14th Battalion of Infantry, Ill. N. G., under command of Colonel William Clendinin, as follows:

Company A, formerly Company D, 14th Battalion, Infantry—Rock Island.
 Company B, formerly Company A, 4th Regiment, Infantry—Oneida.
 Company C, formerly Company B, 4th Regiment, Infantry—Galesburg.
 Company D, formerly Company E, 14th Battalion, Infantry—Cambridge.
 Company E, formerly Company D, 4th Regiment, Infantry—Princeton.
 Company F, formerly Company B, 14th Battalion, Infantry—Moline.
 Company G, formerly Company K, 7th Regiment, Infantry—Lacon.
 Company H, formerly Company C, 4th Regiment, Infantry—Monmouth.
 Company I, formerly Company C, 14th Battalion, Infantry—Morrison.

The 14th Battalion, Infantry, Ill. N. G., was organized in 1877 or 1888, from existing independent companies, which were organized between 1872 and 1876.

The 4th Regiment, Infantry, Ill. N. G., was organized in 1875, from existing independent companies, which were organized between 1872 and 1875.

The 7th Regiment, Infantry, Ill. N. G., was organized in 1875, from existing independent companies, which were organized between 1872 and 1875.

Following the Civil War (1861-1865), until 1872, the Militia of the State of Illinois was in a semi-official status, and not until 1886 were uniforms furnished by the State.

ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-FOURTH FIELD ARTILLERY
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

Camp Forrest, Tennessee
December 15, 1941

OFFICE OF COMMANDING OFFICER

TO: The officers and men of the 124th Field Artillery

I am pleased and honored to extend both greetings and congratulations. The military efficiency, the devotion to duty and the self sacrificing spirit of you officers and men has never been higher than in the last months. You have been called upon to leave your homes and apply yourselves to increasingly difficult tasks as your contribution to the defense of our country. The response and loyalty to every demand made upon you, proves your soldierly qualities and unselfish devotion to duty.

Now once again we are at war, but I have every confidence that each of you is deeply proud of the regiment and remembering our motto, will keep the 124th Field Artillery the outstanding military organization it has been, is now and always shall be through "DEEDS not WORDS".

Sincerely yours,

Fred B. Skeates

HISTORY OF THE 124th FIELD ARTILLERY

The shield is red, yellow, and white for artillery, cavalry and infantry, respectively, the 124th Field Artillery having its origin in the 1st Illinois Cavalry and the 7th Illinois Infantry.

The division on the shield suggests the coat of arms of the City of Chicago, the headquarters of the Regiment. The high point of service in the World War was on the west bank of the Meuse near Luneville in the Arrondissement of Montmedy in support of the 89th Division. The rampant lion on the shield is from the arms of Montmedy and symbolizes not only where the Regiment distinguished itself, but also its fighting characteristics.

The Motto is "Facta Non Verba." (Deeds, not words.)

This Regiment had its origin in the Hibernian Rifles, a civilian military organization existing in Chicago during its early days, and the 1st Illinois Cavalry. In June, 1898, the Hibernian Rifles were organized as the 7th Illinois Infantry, and were mustered into Federal service in the Spanish-American War. The 1st Cavalry was also mustered into Federal service for the Spanish-American War. Both the 7th Infantry and the 1st Cavalry were again in Federal service during the Mexican border troubles in 1916.

During the first World War, the units of the 7th Infantry were transferred to the 108th Ammunition Train, 33rd Division, and the 108th Supply Train, 33rd Division. These units served in the Lucey Sector (Lorraine), the St. Mihiel and Meuse-Argonne offensives, the Verdun-Fromereville and Troyon sector (Lorraine). The 1st Cavalry was redesignated as the 124th Field Artillery, 33rd Division, and supported the 89th, 1st, 91st and 32nd Divisions.

After the World War, the 7th Infantry was reorganized in February, 1921, and redesignated as the 2nd Field Artillery in May, 1921. In December, 1921, it was again redesignated as the 124th Field Artillery.

The Regiment is authorized to wear battle streamers on its Standards for the Lorraine, St. Mihiel and Meuse-Argonne engagements.

HEADQUARTERS
33d Tank Destroyer Battalion
Camp Forrest, Tennessee

December 10, 1941

To the Officers and Men of the 33d Tank Destroyer Battalion:

The 33d Infantry Division Pictorial Review affords the Officers and Men of this Provisional Tank Destroyer Battalion a permanent record of an initial stage in the development of a new component of the armed forces of the United States of America.

In the near future we will be activated as the 633d Tank Destroyer Battalion and allotted to the GHQ Reserve. Seldom is it the privilege of soldiers to take an active part in the experimentation and creation of a component of the Army, and I wish to express my personal thanks to you for the sacrifices and cooperation which insured the permanent organization of this Battalion.

We are now engaged in a war which will be brought to a successful conclusion by development of coordinated, efficient, hard striking forces. Splendid progress has been made in the last few months but much remains to be done. We must redouble our efforts to prepare ourselves for efficient service where needed.

In later years this volume will bring back to you many memories of the work, pride in creation, and loyal service, which we share together.

Yours very truly,

Frederic B. Mann

HISTORY OF THE 33rd TANK DESTROYER BATTALION

On August 12, 1941, the 58th Brigade branch of the 33rd Infantry Division tree was shaken and some 17 officers and 411 men hit the ground. They were rapidly arranged into five Batteries and under a new banner, 33rd Antitank Battalion (Provisional), left with the 33rd Infantry Division for the Arkansas-Louisiana maneuvers August 15, 1941.

The Battalion, unlike "Topsy", didn't just grow. Every man came from either an Antitank Battery or Antitank Platoon. The 123rd Field Artillery contributed its two 75mm Antitank Batteries and the Antitank platoons of its Headquarters Batteries, a total of 368 men. They also contributed 10 of the 14 officers. The balance came from the 122nd and 124th Field Artillery. The 122nd Field Artillery contributed 2 officers and 22 men and the 124th Field Artillery contributed 2 officers and 21 men, all from Antitank Platoons of their Battalion Headquarters Batteries. All officers and men were placed on SD with the Battalion.

The Battalion was placed under the command of Major Frederic B. Mann. Headquarters Battery was commanded by Capt. Lee A. Rodgers, Battery G by Capt. Gus Henson, Battery H by Capt. Louis S. Schnarr, Battery I by 1st Lieut. George Frost, and Battery K by 1st Lieut. Robert E. Ackley. Batteries G and H were 75mm A. T. Batteries and Batteries I and K were 37mm gun Batteries.

Battery G originated from Headquarters Battery, 1st Battalion, 123rd Field Artillery home station Galva, Illinois, and was designated Battery G, Antitank Battery, 1st Battalion, Jan. 1, 1941. Battery H was organized at Macomb, Illinois, January 1, 1941, as A. T. Battery, 2nd Battalion, 123rd Field Artillery. Both Batteries were inducted into Federal Service March 5, 1941, and left for Camp Forrest, Tenn., with the 123rd Field Artillery. In June, 1941, they gained experience on the Tennessee maneuvers. Upon the provisional formation of the 33rd Antitank Battalion, August 12, 1941, each Battery furnished 60 men for the backbone of the remainder of the A. T. Battalion, namely Headquarters Battery, Battery I and Battery K.

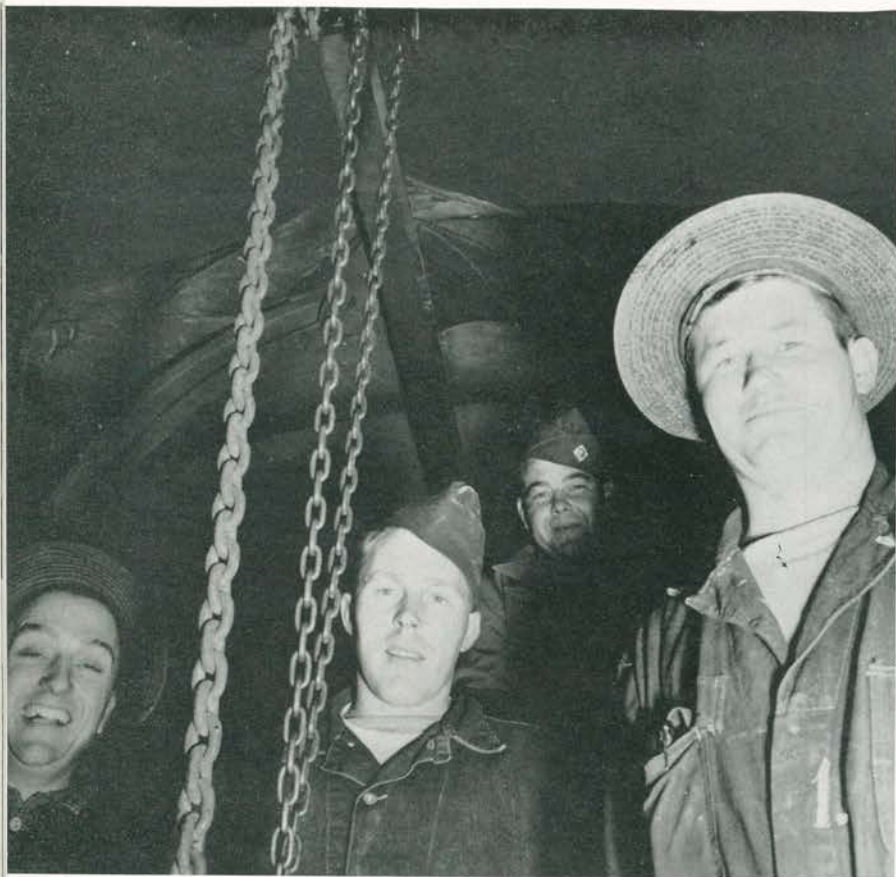

The Battalion gained considerable experience in the Arkansas-Louisiana maneuvers and returned to Camp Forrest, Tennessee, October 9, 1941, taking over a part of old Camp Peay for its home. In the near future we will be activated as the 633rd Tank Destroyer Battalion and allotted to GHQ Reserve.

108TH ENGINEERS (COMBAT)
CAMP FORREST
TULLAHOMA, TENNESSEE

TO OFFICERS AND MEN OF THE 108TH ENGINEERS:

I appreciate the opportunity afforded me in the 33d Infantry Division Pictorial Review to thank the Personnel of this Regiment for their untiring efforts and cooperation during our intensive training period and maneuvers. I want you to know I appreciate it deeply and commend you for it.

We have been doing excellent work, but our job is only partially finished. To develop this unit into a coordinated, hard fighting, efficient machine, will necessitate continued intensive training and cooperation by every man in the Regiment.

Our Country is now at war. Therefore, it is to the interest of every man that he be properly trained and fit for any job that may be given him. This will require that each of us devote all available time and effort to this end.

It is my hope that the officers and men of this Regiment will get a great deal of pleasure from this fine book. Its pictures will recall the joys and rigors of Army life and shall be the memorable reward for all our sacrifices now.

HISTORY OF THE 108th ENGINEERS

BLAZONRY

Shield: Gules, on a pairle argent four mullets of the first, in chief a snake coiled to strike of the second.

Crest: That for the regiments of the Illinois National Guard: On a wreath of the colors (argent and gules) upon a grassy field the blockhouse of old Fort Dearborn proper.

Motto: Magna est veritas (Great is truth).

The shield is red and white, the Engineer Corps colors. The pairle is taken from the unofficial seal of Chicago. The four mullets indicate the major engagements during the World War, while the snake represents Mexican Border duty.

Company A, First Battalion of Engineers, Illinois National Guard, was organized in 1912, and until the World War was the only Engineer unit in Illinois. It saw its first active service on the Mexican border from June to September, 1916.

On May 17, 1917, the First Regiment of Engineers was organized. On August 7, 1917, it was mustered into Federal service as the First Engineers. On September 11 it was redesignated the 108th Engineers of the Thirty-third Division.

The regiment sailed from Hoboken May 7, 1918, on the transport George Washington, arrived at Brest, where it spent one week, and on June 12 moved into the combat zone in the Albert-Amiens sector with the British Fourth Army on the Somme. The First Battalion was assigned to the third British Corps, and the regiment, less the First Battalion, to the Australian Corps.

The 108th Engineers were the first of the Thirty-third Division to occupy front-line trenches. Their first action came July 4 in an attack with the Australians at Hamel.

On August 24, the Thirty-third Division was assigned to the Fifth Corps, First Army, A. E. F., with which it served through the Meuse-Argonne offensive to the end of the war. Following the armistice the regiment served with the Army of Occupation in Luxembourg. It returned to the United States in May, 1919, and following the homecoming celebration in Chicago was mustered out of service June 9 at Camp Grant.

Thirty-three members of the 108th Engineers gave their lives during the war, two received the Distinguished Service Cross, and two the Croix de Guerre.

Following the World War and the subsequent reorganization of the Illinois National Guard in 1924, the 108th Battalion of Engineers was reorganized and assigned to the Thirty-third Division. In 1929 and 1930 the formation of the Headquarters and Service Company, the Medical Detachment and the Second Battalion were authorized, thus completing the regiment. Colonel Hobart has commanded the Engineers continuously since its organization.

Companies B and D served with distinction as the only Engineer troops at the 1937 Ohio River flood.

The Regiment was inducted into Federal service March 5, 1941, and stationed at Camp Forrest.

COLONEL RICHARD SMYKAL
COMMANDING
108TH QUARTERMASTER REGIMENT
UNITED STATES ARMY

February 5, 1942

To My Associates in the 108th Quartermaster Regiment:

This "Pictorial Review of the 33d Division" marks a milepost in the progress of the 108th Quartermaster Regiment--"A great outfit."

The record of outstanding excellence which you have thus far written is but the beginning. Each one of you will contribute toward the glorious chapters of the future.

May you keep this book and refer to it in later years with fond recollections of the joys and experiences of Army life which we have all lived together.

Sincerely

RICHARD SMYKAL
Colonel, 108th Quartermaster Regiment
Commanding

HISTORY OF THE 108th QUARTERMASTER REGIMENT

REGIMENTAL CREST

The buff "Y" in the crest is taken from the seal of the City of Chicago, indicating the branching of the Chicago River, and denotes the birthplace of the regiment, as does the figure of the Fort Dearborn blockhouse on the top of the crest. Buff is the official army color for the Quartermaster Corps. The blue is the official color for the Infantry, and signifies that the regiment is part of an infantry division.

The Latin motto on the scroll, "Sine qua non," literally translated means "without which nothing," or indispensability, and was chosen to indicate the importance of the regiment to the division.

The 108th Quartermaster Regiment officially came into existence in April, 1936, and was formally inducted into the Illinois National Guard on April 22, 1936. Its antecedents date back to the Seventh Illinois Infantry, of which Companies G, H, I, K, L, and M became the 108th Supply Train on October 10, 1917, served in France for approximately two years, and were mustered out June 5, 1919. Other National Guard units have likewise charted their lineage back to the old Seventh before the 108th Quartermaster Regiment was formed; therefore, this regiment has to be content merely to state its claim.

Prior to the formation of the 108th Quartermaster Regiment, the quartermaster facilities and personnel of the division consisted of four officers on the staff of the division commander, designated as the Quartermaster Section of the Special Staff; the Quartermaster Section of the Division Headquarters Detachment; and the 129th and 130th Motor Transport Companies.

On April 22, 1936, these five officers and the units mentioned were designated as the 1st Battalion and nucleus of the 108th Quartermaster Regiment. Orders were also received to organize a Regimental Headquarters Company and Company E, Third Battalion. Headed by Lieutenant Colonel Harold A. Moore, later Colonel and first regimental commander, the division staff officers, Major Richard Smykal, Captain Robert J. Dunne, and 1st Lieutenant George T. Schreiber, became the regimental staff. Captain Julius Klein, an original member of the Quartermaster Section of the Division Staff, remained on the Division Staff as aide to Major General Roy D. Keehn. Lieutenant Colonel Klein is now on the 108th Quartermaster Regiment Staff.

Major Richard Smykal, original commander of the First Battalion, later Lieutenant Colonel and first regimental executive officer, became the second commanding officer of the regiment, and as Colonel is still in command in World War II. Major James U. Sammis, former commander of Division Special Troops, is now Lieutenant Colonel and regimental executive officer. Captain Robert J. Dunne was the first Intelligence and Plans and Training Officer, and 1st Lieutenant George T. Schreiber was promoted to Captain and assigned as the first regimental adjutant. Master Sergeant Philip J. O'Mahoney, Headquarters Detachment, 33rd Division, was appointed 1st Lieutenant and assigned as the first transportation officer.

The 129th and 130th Motor Transport Companies became Companies A and B, respectively, commanded by 1st Lieutenant Carl F. Rounds and 2nd Lieutenant F. Grant Swafford, who both became Captains.

Company A, senior company of the senior battalion of the regiment, claims the honor of being the oldest regimental unit, tracing its history to at least twelve years before the Quartermaster Regiment was established, back to the 108th Motorcycle Company, which was formed on March 10, 1924. In 1929 the 108th Motorcycle Company was redesignated the 129th Motor Transport Company. This unit and the 130th Motor Transport Company became the 33rd Division Quartermaster Train, attached to Special Troops for administration.

The two companies were officially mustered in as the Quartermaster Train, 33rd Division, June 28, 1929. It was nearly seven years later—seven years of struggle with "four wheel drive" trucks sans windshields and cab tops—when the 129th Motor Transport Company suddenly woke up one morning in 1936 and found itself redesignated again; this time as Company A, First Battalion, 108th Quartermaster Regiment. Many of the original members of the 129th Motor Transport Company are still with the unit.

Company A, helping to lead the way, as a senior company should, has a record that will always look well on the pages of Army history. Participating in the valuable Michigan maneuvers of 1936 and later in 1940 helping the 108th Quartermaster Regiment make a real impression in the Camp McCoy maneuvers. Company A was inducted as a well trained and experienced outfit, and after leaving Chicago for Camp Forrest to begin training for an all-out war, the company, strengthened by selectees, took the training tests in stride. Then it went on to prove the indispensability of the QM truck drivers in the Louisiana maneuvers; driving thousands of miles in blackout, never once faltering in transporting the 33rd Division, during the famous maneuvers battles between General Lear's fighting Second Army and General Krueger's fast and capable Third Army.

Company B, 108th Quartermaster Regiment, had its inception on April 22, 1936, when it was re-named from the 130th Motor Transport Company to Company B, First Battalion. It holds the honor of being the second oldest regimental unit. As the 130th Motor Transport Company, its formation was authorized in General Orders No. 3, Illinois Military and Naval Department, dated January 25, 1929. The Company was Federally recognized on June 28, 1929.

HEADQUARTERS 108th MEDICAL REGIMENT
33rd DIVISION
Camp Forrest, Tennessee

TO ALL OFFICERS AND MEN:

I am availing myself of this opportunity to convey my respects to you as soldiers and my appreciation of your wholehearted cooperation in the arduous tasks of training during the past months.

I feel confident that your continued unstinted effort will place this organization, YOUR REGIMENT, at that point of efficiency where you can capably discharge your obligations in conserving the lives and health of the combat soldier. To do this will require sacrifices but it will make you a member of that fraternity of arms which represents the highest type of citizenship. You will then have reached the goal of the Medical Department Soldier.

This book depicts the activities of your camp life and the faces of your comrades who were with you through all of these months of your camp training and maneuvers. I hope you will keep it so that you may refresh your memory in the future when only too frequently facts and features become a hazy blur.

Sincerely yours,

Philip M. Bedessem

COMMANDING THE 108th MEDICAL REGIMENT

Commissioned 1st Lieutenant, Medical Corps, and assigned to Field Hospital No. 2, Illinois National Guard, May 12, 1917. Following induction into Federal service on July 25, 1917, this organization was redesignated as Field Hospital No. 131 of the 108th Sanitary Train. Accompanied the Train to Camp Logan, Houston, Texas, for training. Served with this unit overseas from June 20, 1918, to May 28, 1919. Appointed Captain, Field Hospital No. 131 on February 28, 1919. Participated in three engagements with the organization and awarded the Silver Star Medal for gallantry in action. Mustered out of service June 25, 1919. Accepted commission as Past Assistant Surgeon, U.S.P.H.S. (Reserve). Active duty June 16, 1920, and assigned to the Federal Board of Vocational Education, later designated as United States Veterans' Administration. Served in this capacity until June 6, 1924. Stationed at Chicago, Illinois, and Hines, Illinois. During the latter part of 1923 and early 1924 helped reorganize the 108th Medical Regiment. Made Company Commander of Service Company of the 108th Medical Regiment on July 11, 1924. At this time the unit gained Federal recognition. Appointed Major and Plans and Training Officer of the 108th Medical Regiment on July 24, 1926. Carried on in this capacity until designated Lieutenant Colonel and Executive Officer of the Regiment on May 3, 1937. Inducted into active service March 5, 1941, and accompanied Regiment to Camp Forrest, Tennessee. Attended Carlisle Medical Field Service School from April 1 to April 30, 1941. Appointed Division Medical Inspector, 33rd Division, on May 28, 1941. On the retirement of the Commanding Officer of the 108th Medical Regiment, appointed Surgeon, 33rd Division, and Commanding Officer of the 108th Medical Regiment, October 7, 1941.

Born April 5, 1891, Chicago, Illinois. Attended St. Vincent's Academy and De Paul University. Received M.D. from the Loyola School of Medicine on June 19, 1915. Interned 18 months at the Alexian Brothers' Hospital, Chicago, Illinois. Interned 6 months at the Chicago Lying-in Hospital. Married August 4, 1917, in Chicago, Illinois. Two sons and one daughter. Identified with the hospitalization and care of Veterans at Chicago and Hines, Illinois, for the past twenty years.

HISTORY OF THE 108th MEDICAL REGIMENT

Shield: The Shield is sanguine (the nearest heraldic tincture to maroon) and argent (white)—the Medical Department colors. The Chaussee Gate of Verdun (from the Verdun Medal) and the three mullets (stars) represent the four major engagements in which the organization participated during the World War, its chief engagement being in the vicinity of Verdun. The rattlesnake is for Mexican border service.

Crest: That for the regiments of the Illinois National Guard: On a wreath of colors (argent and sanguine), upon a grassy field the blockhouse of Old Fort Dearborn proper.

Motto: Servamus (We Conserve).

The 108th Medical Regiment, Illinois National Guard, traces its history back to 1910, at which time the first Field Hospital was organized in Illinois. Some five years later a second unit was organized and these units, designated as Field Hospitals Nos. 1 and 2, saw service on the Mexican border from July 3, 1916, to November 3, 1916, at which time they were mustered out of Federal service and continued to serve as units of the Illinois National Guard.

After the entry of the United States into the World War two additional Field Hospitals and four Ambulance Companies were organized under state authority. In August, 1917, all eight units were mustered into the Army of the United States and were redesignated Field Hospitals Nos. 129, 130, 131, and 132. The ambulance units were designated Ambulance Companies 129, 130, 131, and 132. These, together with the Regimental, Hospital and Ambulance Headquarters, were designated the 108th Sanitary Train, Thirty-third Division. The Train was ordered to Camp Logan, Houston, Texas, for training.

After a period of training it embarked for overseas and arrived at Le Havre, France, on June 19, 1918. Remaining in the Huppy Area until July 9th, it proceeded with its division to the Eu Area. Here the Train was stationed along the Bresle River.

From the Eu Area the Train was sent to the Fourth British Army in the region northeast of Amiens (Somme). On August 8th, the Somme Offensive was started and in this the 108th Sanitary Train participated.

On August 23, 1918, the 108th Sanitary Train, along with other foot troops of the Thirty-third Division, entrained to join the American First Army. September 5, 1918, the Train was relieved from the American First Army, transferred to the French Second Army and ordered to the Blercourt Area southwest of Verdun. Here the troops were placed at the disposal of the French Seventeenth Corps. On September 10 to 25 the 108th Sanitary Train was in action in the Verdun-Fromersville Sector, having been transferred to the American Third Corps on the 19th of September.

In the Meuse-Argonne Offensive the Train participated from September 26 to October 21. During this operation Divisional Medical formations cared for 3,639 patients. Of this number only 32 died.

After two days out of the line, relief of the American Seventy-ninth Division was begun in the Troyon Sector where the 108th Sanitary Train was in action from October 26th until the Armistice.

On December 8, 1918, the Train, with the Thirty-third Division, commenced an advance which carried its leading brigades across the Moselle into Rhenish Germany. During this period it was attached to the Army of Occupation, but upon revocation of this disposition, on December 15th, it was withdrawn west of that river and established in the northern part of Luxembourg, with headquarters at Diekirch. There it remained until the latter part of April, 1919. Upon its return to this country the Train was demobilized at Camp Grant, Rockford, Illinois, June 8, 1919.

Reorganization was started in 1922 and Ambulance Company 123 (Company E) was Federally recognized on November 6, 1923. Field Hospital No. 122 (Company G) on January 31, 1924, and Service Company (Headquarters and Service Company), together with Ambulance Company 122 (Company D), on July 10, 1924. These four units were constituted the 108th Medical Regiment, Illinois National Guard, which was accorded Federal recognition on July 10, 1924. The 122nd Collecting Company (Company A) was Federally recognized on May 14, 1936. The Division Surgeon's Office, 108th Medical Regiment, and the Headquarters, Second Battalion, 108th Medical Regiment, were recognized on January 4, 1940. Authority to organize Companies B and H was granted. These Companies were formed in Chicago. On May 20, 1941, Companies C, F and I were organized, bringing the regiment up to full war strength.

Since reorganization after the World War the 108th Medical Regiment served after the devastating tornado in the vicinity of Carbondale, Illinois. It attended all training camps and participated in the Second Army Maneuvers of 1936 and 1940.

On March 5, 1941, the regiment was inducted into active service and sent to Camp Forrest, Tennessee. There its entire personnel participated in an intensive 13 weeks' mobilization training program. Likewise, in the VII Corps, Second Army, and GHQ maneuvers from August 7, 1941, to October 6, 1941.

Seven of the present officers are veterans of the World War. The regimental commander, Lieutenant Colonel Bedessem, Lieutenant Colonel Karr, and Captain Baum were awarded the Silver Star Medal for gallantry in action.

Our motto is "Servamus."

History of the 33rd Division

a field artillery brigade with three regiments (all brigades commanded by brigadier generals); a regiment of combat engineers, a medical regiment, a quartermaster regiment, and an organization of special troop units consisting of military police, signal, ordnance, and headquarters companies enlisted personnel. Attached to the division were: an aviation squadron, an anti-aircraft artillery regiment, two squadrons of cavalry, and a regiment, less one battalion of colored infantry.

On March 5, 1941, the 33rd Division was inducted, with a strength of 11,000 officers and men, into the United States Army, just as the troops from Illinois were inducted in 1917. All of the attached troops were likewise inducted, but not with the 33rd Division.

The Division moved early in March, 1941, to Camp Forrest (Tullahoma), Tennessee, which had been newly constructed for the purpose of housing troops. In April and May 5,000 sons of Illinois joined the Division as recruits and were rapidly trained to take their places with high efficiency with the rest of the Division. In June and July 3,000 additional trained replacements came to the Division from Fort Bragg, N. C., and Camp Croft, S. C. These additions gave the Division a total strength of 19,000 officers and men. On December 7, 1941, and at the time of the entry of the United States into World War II, the entire command was still stationed and in training at Camp Forrest, Tennessee.

History of the 132nd Infantry

On March 5, 1941, the 132nd Infantry was ordered to active Federal Service by Executive Order of the President of the United States, and on March 28, 1941, arrived at Camp Forrest, Tennessee. Then began a most intensive training program carefully designed to make every man a fighting unit of a large well knit team. During this period considerable time and effort was spent to make the camp more comfortable and by the time the first increment of Selective Service men arrived, Camp Forrest had begun to look more like an old established Army post. Then, on August 11, 1941, the Regiment left Camp Forrest for intensive field training as part of the great Second Army team and displayed the excellency of their training against the various "simulated" hostile forces of both REDS and BLUES in Arkansas and Louisiana. After welcome furloughs to visit home after the maneuvers and the subsequent trip to Chicago and participation in the Armistice Day celebration there as guests of the State of Illinois and the City of Chicago, the regiment returned to Camp Forrest, Tennessee, to complete the final training phase intended to make it a unit of "THE BEST DISCIPLINED," "BEST TRAINED," "SMARTEST AND MOST ALERT," and "MOST LOYAL" Army of the Armed Forces of the United States.

emerged from the mud, cleaned themselves, their guns and horses and moved freely in the open without fear of hostile fire or airplane detection. November 14th, the regiment was ordered to advance with the Army of Occupation. After spending the rest of the winter in the Grand Duchy of Luxembourg, the regiment returned to the United States on May 25, 1919, aboard the transport America and was mustered out of service at Camp Grant on June 8th of the same year.

During the service abroad, the regiment received nine citations. Col. Milton J. Foreman was decorated with the Distinguished Service Medal, the Distinguished Service

Cross, the French Legion of Honor and Croix de Guerre. Captain Robert E. Myhrman, now Colonel, was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross, the French Legion of Honor and Croix de Guerre. Lieut. Dan E. Schueren, now Major, Headquarters 1st Battalion; Lieut. Latimer A. Johns, killed in action; Lieut. Harold A. Wascher, Lieut. Charles K. Templeton, both severely wounded, and ten enlisted men were awarded the Distinguished Service Cross. Eighty-eight officers and men were cited in orders by General Pershing. Two hundred and one names were placed on the 33rd Division honor roll by Major General George Bell, Jr., Division Commander, and ninety-one were cited by Brigadier General Henry D. Todd, Jr., then commanding General of the 58th Field Artillery Brigade. The regiment's total casualties were twenty-five officers and men killed or died of wounds, and seventy-four wounded in action.

POST-WAR PERIOD—

In 1920, with a nucleus of war-time officers, the reorganization of the regiment got under way and on November 11, 1920, the 1st Battalion received federal recognition. Just one year later the job was finished and the Regimental Headquarters and remaining units were granted federal recognition under Col. Frank R. Schwengel. The regiment was then quartered in its new armory at 234 E. Chicago Avenue which had been under construction at the outbreak of the war.

In 1926, the Headquarters and Headquarters Battery of the 58th Field Artillery Brigade were organized, and Col. Schwengel was promoted to Brigadier General and given the command. Lieut. Col. Samuel T. Lawton, now Major General, Commanding 33rd Infantry Division, was appointed Colonel and commanded the Regiment until he was advanced to Brigadier General in January, 1936, to succeed General Schwengel upon the latter's retirement. The regimental executive, Lieut. Col. Robert E. Myhrman, then took command with the rank of Colonel.

The regiment was officially re-designated 75mm Truck-Drawn Field Artillery on October 9, 1939, but motor equipment was not received until Fall, 1940, and the horses were retained until that time.

Pursuant to Executive Order No. 8633 the 122nd Field Artillery was inducted into Active Federal Service on the 5th of March, 1940. After completing physical examination the regiment entrained on two sections Friday the 14th of March to arrive in Camp Forrest, Tullahoma, Tennessee, the 15th of March, 1941.

After completion of the mobilization training program the regiment participated in the Second Army Maneuvers in Arkansas and Louisiana, August 17th-September 28th, 1941, returning to Camp Forrest October 5th, 1941, ready for any service it may be called upon to perform.

History of the 123rd Field Artillery

During the intervening years, and prior to 1898, the following changes took place with the regiment:

Company B (Oneida) was disbanded in 1885, another Company being organized at Mendota, later changing location to Geneseo in 1890; Company G (Lacon) was disbanded in 1884, (March 6th) but was reorganized in May, 1884, later changing location to Dixon; Company D changed location from Cambridge to Abingdon; Company E from Princeton to Sterling.

During this period the following companies were added to the regiment:

Company K, formerly Company C, 3rd Regiment, Infantry was transferred to the regiment at Subletter, later changing location to La Moille; Company L was added at Freeport; Company M, formerly Company D, 4th Regiment, Infantry was transferred to the regiment and located at Ottawa, later changing to Galena.

The 6th Regiment, Infantry, Ill. N. G., under command of Colonel D. Jack Foster, was mustered into the Federal Service at Springfield, Illinois, on May 11, 1898 as the 6th Regiment, Illinois Volunteer Infantry for the Spanish-American War. Served in Porto Rico and Cuba from July 25, 1898 until September 7, 1898 and was mustered out of the service at Springfield, Illinois on November 25, 1898.

On April 2, 1936 authority was received from the War Department, National Guard Bureau, to organize and add the following units to the 123rd Field Artillery:

Regimental Headquarters
Regimental Headquarters Battery
The Second Battalion
Med. Dept. Det. (Less 3rd Bn. Sec.)

By Special Order No. 94 Military and Naval Department of Illinois, the following units were added to the regiment:

The then existing Battery B (Monmouth) was converted and redesignated Regimental Headquarters Battery at Monmouth on May 10, 1936; Battery B (New) was organized and mustered in at Macomb on May 10, 1936; the Medical Department Detachment, (Less 3rd Bn. Sec.) was organized and mustered in at Galesburg on May 10, 1936; the Second Battalion Headquarters Battery and Combat Train and Battery C were organized and mustered in at Rock Island on May 10, 1936 and Battery D was organized and mustered in at Moline on May 10, 1936. By Special Order No. 153, Military and Naval Department of Illinois Headquarters, 123rd Field Artillery was organized at Monmouth on July 23, 1936 under command of Colonel Dell B. Hardin and the Headquarters, Second Battalion was organized at Galesburg on July 23, 1936, under command of Major Rubin C. Risburg. Major Franz A. Ahlstrand was promoted to command the 1st Battalion, 123rd Field Arty. at Monmouth, vice Major Hardin—promoted.

Later, under War Department, National Guard Bureau, March 6, 1937, authority the following units were authorized to complete the regiment:

Service Battery and Band Section
3rd Battalion Section, Med. Dept. Det.
The 3rd Battalion.

And by Special Order No. 91 Military and Naval Department of Illinois, April 6, 1937, the following units were added:

The then existing 1st Battalion Headquarters Battery & Combat Train was converted and redesignated Service Battery (less Band Section) at Monmouth on April 11, 1937; the Band Section was organized and mustered in at Macomb on April 11, 1937; a new unit, the 1st Battalion Headquarters Battery and Combat Train was organized and mustered in at Galva on April 11, 1937; the 3rd Battalion Headquarters Battery and Combat Train and Battery E were organized and mustered in at East St. Louis on August 15, 1937; Battery F was organized and mustered in at Alton on October 17, 1937. Headquarters, 3rd Battalion was organized at Monmouth under command of Major George W. McClure on November 1, 1937. This then completed the regiment under existing National Guard Tables of Organization.

The 3rd Battalion, 123rd Field Artillery, was on active duty at Belleville, Illinois, in March, 1938, at the tornado disaster.

Under authority contained in Special Order No. 305, M. & N. D. of Ill., December 30, 1940, the 123rd Field Artillery was reorganized on January 1, 1941, from a three Battalion Regiment to a two Battalion Regiment as follows:

Old Designation	New Designation	Station
Hq. Btry., 1st Bn.	A. T. Btry., 1st Bn. (g)	Galva
Btry. B., 1st Bn.	Btry. D, 2nd Bn.	Macomb
Hq., 2nd Bn.	Hq., 1st Bn.	Rock Island
Hq. Btry., 2nd Bn.	Hq. Btry., 1st Bn.	Rock Island
Btry. C, 2nd Bn.	Btry. C, 1st Bn.	Rock Island
Btry. D, 2nd Bn.	Btry. B, 1st Bn.	Moline
Hq., 3rd Bn.	Hq., 2nd Bn.	Monmouth
Hq. Btry., 3rd Bn.	Hq. Btry., 2nd Bn.	E. St. Louis
Btry. E, 3rd Bn.	Btry. E, 2nd Bn.	E. St. Louis
Btry. F, 3rd Bn.	Btry. F, 2nd Bn.	Alton

Three new units were also authorized and organized 1 January 1941 under the same order (S. O. 305), as follows:

Service Battery, 1st Bn.—Monmouth
Service Battery, 2nd Bn.—Monmouth
Anti-Tank Battery, 2nd Bn. (H)—Macomb

This brought the regiment to full authorized allotment of units for a 155 MM Howitzer Regiment Truck Drawn (T/O 6-41) as of 1 January 1941.

The entire regiment was mustered into active Military Service of the U.S., along with other units of the 33rd Infantry-Division of Illinois at home stations on 5 March 1941, under Executive Order of the President of the U. S., No. 8633, January 14, 1941, republished to units of 33rd Division under Special Order No. 38, M. & N. D. of Illinois 14 February 1941.

On 15 March 1941, advance units were dispatched by motor vehicle to prepare camp at Camp Forrest, Tennessee for the remainder of the regiment arriving in Camp Forrest, Tennessee on 18 and 19 March 1941.

The regiment proceeded to undergo intensive training for period of fifteen weeks, participating in 2nd Army Maneuvers in Arkansas-Louisiana Area, August 15-October 3, 1941, returning to Camp Forrest on 6 October, taking up intensive training again continuing at present time.

History of the 108th Quartermaster Regiment

Since its inception, Company B has continued to live up to its high standards of military proficiency. It contributed much to the record of the 108th Quartermaster Regiment made in the 1936 Michigan maneuvers and the 1940 Wisconsin-Camp McCoy maneuvers. When the Company moved out of Chicago enroute to Camp Forrest last March fifth, it was composed of many veterans.

Headquarters Company was mustered into service May 27, 1936. The company was organized by Captain Paul W. Jones, its first commander, by the transfer of the Division Quartermaster Platoon from Headquarters Detachment, 33rd Division, and increasing that nucleus to company maintenance strength. As testimony to the men who thus transferred to the new company, let it be recorded that many of them are still members of the regiment, and several are now officers. All are key men in their units. First assembly for the unit was in the Armory of the Evanston Township High School on May 22, 1936, a week prior to muster. The original first sergeant was Charles W. Doubleday, Jr.

Headquarters Company furnishes the personnel for regimental headquarters and the gas and oil platoon. The Division Quartermaster Platoon, which handles the food and supplies for the division, also comes from Headquarters Company.

Company E was mustered into service on June 18, 1936, at Camp Grant, Illinois. The unit was formed under the supervision of Captain Marshall G. Buck, who later became the first commander of the company. In January, 1937, the unit was moved to Rockford and quartered in the new armory.

Company E is capable of establishing independent repair shops in the field to furnish third echelon repair and supply service for the motor vehicles of the 33rd Division. The personnel of the organization is composed of skilled craftsmen, each man an expert in his own particular field. Among them are motor mechanics, welders, machinists, blacksmiths, sheet metal workers, painters, tire repair men, battery experts, electricians, carpenters, and motorcycle mechanics.

The company has one of the biggest jobs in the motorized 33rd Infantry Division. Continual maintenance of all the varied types of vehicles is necessary. In the field, tons of parts must be moved; many times, as illustrated by the Louisiana maneuvers, at a moment's notice. During war, in the theatre of operations, vehicles must be repaired under blackout conditions, because if the enemy can cripple the divisional maintenance company, it may seriously impair the efficiency of the division in the transportation of its troops to the front.

The regiment's first field training was the Second Army maneuvers in Michigan in 1936. This was severe training for a green organization, but was invaluable instruction. In February, 1937, the regiment was called for active duty in the flood zone in southern Illinois and was stationed at West Frankfort.

Before the 1937 field training period, the Second Battalion was organized, and consisted of Battalion Headquarters, and Companies C and D, stationed at Bloomington. The battalion was commanded by Major John H. Russell, and the companies by Captain Richard F. Stockton and Captain H. Frederick Parker, respectively. The units were Federally recognized April 14, 1937, and battalion headquarters on May 11, 1937.

Since its inception, Company C has maintained a high standard of excellence. In 1939, the company held the regimental trophies for "Best Company" and for the Field Training Softball Championship. In Camp Forrest and on the Louisiana maneuvers, Company C continued to be one of the best companies in the regiment.

Company D was organized as the result of considerable work on the part of several Bloomington business men as was Company C. These men formed the Bloomington Civic Committee and conducted an intensive campaign for recruits from March ninth to April ninth.

The two companies drove many miles in Louisiana and Arkansas and other Southern states during the 1941 maneuvers, and are considered as having some of the finest soldier-drivers in the regiment.

On June 1, 1937, Company F of Chicago was Federally recognized, and Headquarters Detachment, Third Battalion, was recognized on January 8, 1938, thus completing the Third Battalion. Major K. L. Van Sickle was the first battalion commander. He was a reserve officer who had served with the regiment during its first field training period and before his retirement in 1940 was Lieutenant Colonel, Regimental Executive Officer.

Headquarters Detachment, Third Battalion, was organized from personnel of Company E at Rockford, but because of the necessity of moving the battalion headquarters to Chicago, the detachment was dissolved on October 31, 1937, and activated at Chicago on December 6, 1937.

First Lieutenant Philip J. O'Mahoney of the regimental staff was assigned as the first commander of Company F and shortly afterwards was promoted to captain. The first sergeant was Norman C. Thompson, now a Captain, and Division Transportation Officer under the Division Quartermaster.

The primary function of Company F is two-fold: First, to provide passenger car service to the Commanding General, 33rd Infantry Division, and to the members of his staff; second, to deliver the written orders, messages, and dispatches from the Division Message Center to the brigades and other units.

During field training, such as the Louisiana maneuvers, the company is frequently called upon to provide service twenty-four hours a day. Eighteen hours is looked upon as just another day's work.

The Medical Department Detachment of the regiment was Federally recognized on May 10, 1937. Captain Roland I. Pritikin, who had seen service with the regiment during its tour of duty in the flood area, was the first commander of the detachment.

Service Company was organized August 5, 1940, with Captain Charles W. Doubleday, Jr., as the first company commander. The function of Service Company is the distribution of Class I supplies. This is important to the entire division, for if the division be denied food for even a day it would seriously affect all operations.

An article written by Sergeant Leo B. White, editor of Chassis Chatter, the regimental newspaper, said, "The record time for unloading a boxcar of 7500 rations during the Louisiana maneuvers was set by Service Company, 108th Quartermaster Regiment; the time was 27 minutes, under blackout conditions. This mark was better than any competitive unit in the Second Army."

The regiment has occupied three armories in Chicago: First the armory formerly used by the 129th and 130th Motor Transport Companies at Ravenswood and Montrose Avenues, a building rented by the State of Illinois; second, the armory at 3400 North Western Avenue. Thereafter, a few months prior to induction, the regiment moved to its new home, the new Northwest Armory at North Avenue and Kedzie, the largest armory in the State.

While the regiment awaited the call to be inducted into the Army of the United States, it started intensive training. An emergency had been declared, and the 108th Quartermaster Regiment, fully realizing its serious duty, was anxious to get into active Federal service. An impressive ceremony was held on March 5, 1941, the day of induction; when the regiment took the Oath of Allegiance to the United States and all its members became soldiers of the first army of the world.

Finally, happy and determined, but sobered in thought, the regiment pulled out of the LaSalle Street Station bound for Camp Forrest. Although the majority of the regiment went by rail, all the regiment's vehicles were driven in convoys to the camp—convoys that seemed difficult at that time, but now, after driving in the Louisiana maneuvers and on responsible functions throughout the South after war was declared, would seem merely another routine duty.

The regiment has made history in Camp Forrest—a record that is envied by all organizations. Lieutenant

General Ben Lear, Commanding General of the Second Army, at the conclusion of the training tests which climaxed the thirteen weeks of basic training in the summer of 1941, said, "It is my pleasure to commend the 108th Quartermaster Regiment, Colonel Richard Smykal, and the officers, and every man for the efficiency they have displayed in accomplishing their mission."

Colonel N. L. Simmonds, Quartermaster, 7th Army Corps, Chief Inspector, said, "The 108th Quartermaster Regiment is excellent in most respects. The regiment is ready to accomplish its mission in the field." This rating was singularly accorded to this regiment.

Colonel Richard Smykal, who has been connected with the regiment from its beginning, and became the second commanding officer in its history, led his regiment to top position in the Wisconsin maneuvers and is still in command during the serious emergency confronting America today.

Colonel Smykal came from the ranks and he is still a Colonel in the ranks because he fought his way up and got each and every promotion the hard way. It is understandable why Colonel Smykal, at the time this history is written, is the youngest full Colonel in the Second Army. He is a hard worker, a humanitarian, a man who understands the problems of his officers and men. He never asks an officer or an enlisted man to do anything he doesn't do himself.

After completing his studies at the University of Illinois, where he made a brilliant military as well as a scholastic record, and where in his senior year he was Brigade Commander of Cadets, Colonel Smykal was appointed 2nd Lieutenant, Infantry, ORC, in 1922. From then on his rise was rapid: First Lieutenant, 1923; Captain, 1925; and in 1932 he was assigned to the General Staff Section, Assistant G-3, Headquarters, 33rd Division, with the rank of Major.

The regiment was ready for the Louisiana maneuvers, the largest war games ever held in the world. Playing a key role in the important job of transporting the division from Camp Forrest, the regiment successfully carried the fighting units of the 33rd to the front in Louisiana to help the remaining troops of the Second Army wage a mighty battle against the capable Third Army.

The regiment functioned as smoothly in the field as at camp; day after day and night after night the truck companies drove over narrow Louisiana roads in blackout without a serious accident. These maneuvers were as near warlike as possible. The regiment proved it can function as well in war when thousands of lives depend on it as in peace.

Mobility is the keynote of a good offensive. The regiment moved the division quickly and surely, each time helping the Second Army to gain an objective or win in its strategic move. To quote from Chassis Chatter (Regimental news sheet), "General Lear said, 'Truck drivers were the real heroes of the battle (Louisiana Maneuvers), driving continuously, without sleep, over all types of terrain, bearing up under heavy dust and the difficulties of blackout.' The general's statement was of particular interest to the 108th Quartermaster Regiment which has driven thousands of maneuver miles."

The officers and men returned from Louisiana tougher, harder, and more experienced, ready for any emergency at any time. Furloughs were in the limelight. The men returned to Illinois for a few days, happy to enjoy the short vacation, and happy in the knowledge that they were doing a job well.

Christmas, the first Christmas in the field, was a happy day. Because of the war, only a few were able to spend the day at home. But with carols being played on the chimes of the regimental chapel, a big turkey dinner, and the exchange of gifts, the officers and men enjoyed a real holiday.

Major General Samuel T. Lawton, Commanding General, 33rd Infantry Division, and Mrs. Lawton, honored the regiment as guests of Colonel and Mrs. Smykal for the Christmas Day celebration. In his address to the officers at the Christmas dinner, General Lawton said, "I feel that if the spirit of the 108th Quartermaster Regiment is the spirit of the 33rd Division, we have the best division in the Second Army. And if this spirit prevails then we have the best army in our history. I am just as proud as you are that our distinguished Army commander, Lieutenant General Ben Lear, selected your regiment for special praise during his inspection last summer, and you have kept up this average of fine efficiency and thoroughness."

"Never be caught napping" is an unofficial motto of the regiment. On this premise, the officers and men are preparing daily to be able to meet any future emergency. They realize the meaning of war, and realize the essential part trained organizations, such as this regiment, must play in it. The men of the regiment, also conscious of all this, are anxiously waiting for orders to duty on the vast battle front of World War II.

Colonel Smykal, in his New Year's message to the regiment, published in Chassis Chatter, expressed the true spirit of the regiment:

"By your excellent attainments and the commendations you have received during the past year, you have demonstrated your superior ability to do the soldier's job.

"These accomplishments, and the high standards which you have set, are the source of very great pride to me, as I know they are to every one of you. The hard work you have done was with a high spirit and a serious devotion.

"Now let us start the NEW YEAR with energy, determination, and confidence for greater success to a GREAT OUTFIT.

"So much for my official commendation—which is yours. You have made it possible for General Lear to select our Regiment for special praise.

"Permit me now to add a few personal lines as your friend.

"I realize that the road thus far has been pretty tough—we prepared—and are still preparing, to be 'fit to fight in battle; your personal loyalty and devotion have made and are making, our task a little easier—if and when the time comes. I want you all to know how much I appreciate all this.

"I wish you and your families a very HAPPY NEW YEAR—a year that gives us all an opportunity to do our share as proud Americans, devoted to service, country, and our own families.

"GOD BLESS YOU ALL.

Your Colonel,
'Dick' Smykal."
